The inner workings of the Kress organization are little understood by those on the outside. Certain ideals have dominated the organization from its inception thirty-six years ago. These ideals have been successfully worked out for the purpose of bringing the best merchandise obtainable to the largest number of people at the lowest price consistent with quality.

This has resulted in a world-wide organization which today reaches every known part of the manufacturing world and results in securing merchandise of value such as cannot be procured under any other conditions.

facturers and consumers alike as the Kress stores, now located in the leading cities of the country from Atlantic to Pacific

While Kress stores mean much to the manufacturers, they mean more to the customer, for no matter how perfect the factory and its equipment, it is only as we work with the manufacturer, and by cooperation with him, that it is possible to secure the best merchandise at Kress prices.

Kress merchandise is today standard in one hundred sixty stores, and is made the basis by which all manufacturers and retailers measure value to you—the customer.

Announcement

THE new Kress store will be ready for business Saturday, May 31, 1924, at 9 Whitehall St. and 6-8 South Broad St.

We feel reasonably sure this announcement will be greeted with approval by the thousands who daily patronize the Kress stores.

The new Kress store, in point of equipment, is not equaled by any other 5, 10 and 25 cent store in the world. Every known feature which will add to the comfort and convenience of shopping has been installed, and during the informal opening next Friday you will be privileged to inspect every feature and to see for yourself in an informal way the advantages of this most modern of stores.

Perhaps no retailing stores in the world mean so much to manu-and more smoke reeking upward from fifty cigars and cigarettes.

Business went on, but as the clock crept around to 1 o'clock, which was 2 o'clock in Washington, the tenseness became noticeable—men fidgeted.

Past national commander, Hanford MacNider, who Lac been appointed to bring the fateful news, had his ear glued to a telephone at 2 o'clock Washington time, when the senate was to vote on the adjusted compensation bill. At 2 o'clock the legion would know if again it was to be disappointed or whether it was victorious after nearly six years of unflagging iter nearly six years of unflagging after nearly six years of untiagging effort.

The fifty or more men straining at the leash as they attempted to interest themselves in the reports being read felt sick lawardly. They represented $00,000 world war veterans who had been given to these fifty or more men the task of obtaining passage of the adjusted compensation bill. Would these men report defeat and explain or would they whoop out victory and be applauded?

It was four minutes past 1, central time—another few minutes would tell the tale. The finance report was read and accepted: the national legislative report was read and accepted. It told the status of the adjusted compensation bill at the time it was writ-

Some 10 x of them composed telegrams to senators, but tore them up, knowing that they would not be received until after the voting was ever and the issue decided perhaps once for all.

In Breathless Suspense.

Like men awarting the verdict of a jury in a capital offense, these committeemen who had worked hard felt their breath coming quickly, their palms sweated, their faces and hearts throbbed! It was twenty minutes past 1. Up-

It was twenty minutes past I. Upstairs in the publicity office a nervous young reporter sat expectantly at a desk. The phone jingled raucously. "United Press talking," said a harsh voice, "the senate voting, we will give you the result in a minute. Please get a statement ready from National Commander John R. Quinn."

Every nerve in the young reporter's body quivered, his mouth dried up.

body quivered, his mouth dried up, his heart jumped and pounded in his chest. He waited one minute; two minutes. He got up and paced the room with nervous feet. He sat down only to get up and fidget for a cigar-cite. For six roonths he had labored at publicity in favor of adjusted compensation. His heart was in it. It was just and right. If the bill did not pass he felt he would resign and become a soap box orator. Five minutes had passed. Suddenly the telephone iingled its harsh chatter. He quivered, his mouth dried bone jingled its harsh chatter. He sat down suddenly as if his feet had sat down suddenly as if his feet had melted and would no longer support him; before the telephone receiver his hand poised, he could not pick it up. His face had paled. The excitement of suspense had gripped him and he was afraid to learn the news. He pinched out his eigarette, carefully laid the butt on a tray. Then his face hardening and obliterating the boyish lines, he grasped the receiver and in a firm voice cried "Hello." "Hello," came the familiarly harsh voice over the thin wire; "United Press calling. Jst got a flash, the soldiers bonus hill has passed." "Got that statement!" "Eh, what?" cried the youthful reporter, bewildered.

"Passed, what do you mean? Did it go over the veto?"

"Of course," said the harsh voice, inpatiently. "What did you think? The United Press has scooped the country. Hurry up that statement, will you? I'll call you with the vote."

The reporter did not hear the last.
Energy vitalized him. He sprang to his feet and ran—ran madly, with feet slipping and skidding, down two flights of stairs—

Down the hall he clattered and brought up with a jerk against the doorway of the smoke filled room where representatives of 800,000 Lecionaires in forty-eight states were listening to the report of Watson B. Miller, of Wasnington, D. C., chairman of the rational rehabilitation committee.

As the reporter paused on the threshold, his face flushed, his eyes glistening, he saw the national commander, John R. Quinn, look up expectantly.

which gave the ratio as 5-4-3 with the country in second place, as against the treaty ratio of 5-5-3.

The Illinois member amounced that next Wednesday the committee plans to call up the construction program bill, which, he said, would at least "establish a 5-4-3 standing. He will ask for amendment of the bill to provide $5.500.000 for elevation of guns on 13 battleships as requested by the navy department.

MEXICAN ELECTION WILL NOT AFFECT AMERICAN POLICY

Mexico City, May 24.—Charles B. Varren, the American ambassador eclared today that any change in the Mexican administration by reason of the Jaly presidential election would not affect the policy of the United States toward Mexico, as it was based upon agreements reached in the 1923 ecognition conferences, with the re-ultant general and special claims con-entions protecting American oil and ventions protecting American oil and agrarian rights.

He asserted the American policy would include insistence upon the agreements reached with the Obregon administration, whether General Calles or General Flores was elected.

His statement regarding the conventions, especially wherein they guarantee American interests, which were be affected under the agrarian may be affected under the agrarian program, is regarded as significant in-view of the advanced agrarian theories which General Calles is advocating in

FORCED TO WITHDRAW DEMAND FOR REASON

Hill Has Been in Charge of Negro Rural School Work Maintained by Rockefeller Funds.

Attorney General George M. Napier was asked Saturday to prepare an opinion as to the authority of State Superintendent of Schools N. H. Ballard to dismiss from his position Walter B. Hill, special supervisor o rural schools in Georgia.

The place held by Mr. Hill is maintained by funds sent to Georgia by the General Education board administering the Rockefeller educational foundation funds, at New York. In all this organization sends to Georgia each year about $50,000. Part of this money, amounting to $17,500, pays the salaries of Mr. Hill, who is supervisor of negro rura! schools of M. L. Price Tags—and Place Tags

Let's consider stores for a minute.

The ones which have merchandise plainly marked with prices win your confidence by their frankness, besides making the inspection and selection of their offerings a matter of greater simplicity.

But-it's a little beyond the ability of stores to mark all goods with place tags-telling where to find each item they carry. Stores may be systematically departmentized but that's about as far as sys-

It is the province of The Constitution's A-B-C Classified Section alone to have all its offerings marked with alphabetically and numerical place tags -which instantly show you exactly where to find the things you want.

You'll find many of the classified offers carry price tags-and you'll find all of them carry place tags. Here's convenient service indeed for the opportu-

Transportation for Morningside

OUR SALES in this incomparable residential section havebeen tremendous. Since our sales campaign was inaugurated in November of last year, we have continually advertised the fact that the residents of Morningside would have the best of everything. Thus far we have made good. Yesterday we finished pouring concrete on Morningside Drive, from Highland Avenue west, completing more than one mile. This street now carries absolutely every modern convenience: gas, water, lights, sewers, concrete streets, sidewalks and curbing, and, last but not least,

Auction! Auction! Wednesday, May 28th, at 10 A. M.

IN BEAUTIFUL

Moreland Heights AN IMPROVED HIGH-CLASS HOME SECTION

Building Lots and 3 Bungalows

COME OUT! NAME YOUR OWN PRICE!

IT IS SELDOM that an opportunity presents itself to buy at auction property in this class—You cannot afford to miss this sale—you owe it to yourself to at least come out during the ABSOLUTE AUCTION and see the values that will be given. We want you to be convinced that this will really be what we say, an ABSOLUTE AUCTION, and that all the property MUST move, at the price you NAME!

READ THESE DETAILS AND—ACT!

LOCATION AND ADVANTAGES

MORELAND HEIGHTS is bounded by Moreland avenue, Boulevard DeKalb, Hardee street and Center street, surrounded by a fast growing community of home owners, near fine schools, churches and within two blocks of the car line, right in a section that will appeal to the prospective home owner. Buildings now under contruction in and around Moreland Heights assures you of enhancement of this property. The owners of Moreland Heights have do-nated two and one-half acres of land in the center of the subdivision for a park and playground for the children. Every growing child needs plenty of exercise and recreation-this is the place

CONVENIENCES

ELECTRICITY, gas, water, sewerage. All conveniences are down, the streets are paved, most of them are concrete, sidewalks are down, the land is well drained-after you have bought your lot, there's nothing to do but build your house. Adequate restrictions protect the home owner.

THREE BUNGALOWS

THERE are three five-room bungalows to be included in the sale.

One on Screven avenue, just off Hardee street, has five rooms, all conveniences, hardwood floors, furnace heat, lot 50x140. Another one on Boulevard DeKalb between Sanderson and Center streets, five rooms and all conveniences, on a beautiful lot. Another one on Boulevard DeKalb right at the corner of South Moreland, facing two prominent thoroughfares, has all modern conveniences, lot 50x250, and is a pretty piece of property. Remember-You can buy them at your price.

INVESTORS AND BUILDERS

IT IS FIRST important to note that this property is only 15 MIN-UTES FROM FIVE POINTS! and in a growing community of fine homes, where more are being built. Mrs. Nora G. Webb, one of Atlanta's most successful builders, has six homes under construction in this subdivision, and plans are being drawn for several more. SOME OF THE LOTS HERE ARE OVER 400 feet in depth. These, and many other reasons are sufficient proof to judicious investors that here is the section to buy and build.

FREE BARBECUE AND BAND CONCERT

REGARDLESS of whether you intend to buy or not, we invite you to come on out to our BARBECUE—bring the entire family if you wish—be entertained by a band. You will be assured of a good time, with plenty to eat.

WE WANT you to BE THERE! - we are confident that after seeing this property, noting the many advantages, and being convinced that you may buy AT YOUR OWN PRICE, you will be glad

ABSOLUTE AUCTION, RAIN OR SHINE Wednesday, May 28th, at 10 A. M. DON'T FORGET THE DATE

We Make It Easy for All Atlanta Motorists to Equip with Full-Size Balloons

"America Should Produce
Its Own Rubber"—

Firestone Simplified Application of

BALLOON GUM-DIPPED CORDS
at Minimum Cost

The Firestone Program of manufacturing Balloon tires, tubes, rims and wheels has solved the problem of making full-size Balloons available to a new and vastly increased field of motor car owners. Compromises and makeshifts—semiballoons to fit present rims—need not be accepted. We, the Firestone dealers, have equipment and a special system of application which assures a real job—finished and complete in every particular—applied immediately, at a cost well within the reach of millions of motorists. It is an easy job to apply this simplified Firestone unit. Special equipment which Firestone has developed and controls, and is manufacturing for their tire dealers, gives us an exclusive advantage in turning out an accurate, balanced wheel job which exactly fits your present hubs. If your car is now on wood wheels, rims and spokes only are replaced. The cost is little or no more than a set of rims and we can equip your car almost as quickly as a tire change can be made.

100 per cent Tire Satisfaction

We know you will never be satisfied with anything less than full-sized balloons. In no other way can you get the complete results in riding comfort, safety and economy. Insist on all the benefits of the real balloon—the advantages which have convinced over 20 car manufacturers and over 40,000 car owners.

Do not compromise. Remember these four points. We, the Firestone dealers, offer you full-size balloons, that are Gum-Dipped (the special Firestone process that makes the low-pressure tire practical), with carefully engineered spokes and rims (also built by Firestone) and we guarantee you a balanced, dependable job. Furthermore, if you do not like your car on Balloons we will reapply your old tire equipment at no cost to you.

Equip Now for Summer Driving

We Are Stocked and Organized to Handle Any Car

Here is your opportunity to get unheard-of satisfaction from your present car—improved appearance, superlative comfort and safety, and a new standard of low-cost operation. The savings that result from reduced depreciation, lower maintenance and fuel expense, and long tire mileage, make it an economy to ride on Firestone Full-Size Gum-Dipped Balloons.

Within a few hours you can join the rapidly increasing army of Balloon Motorists, and begin immediately to enjoy these wonderful tires.

See us. Get a demonstration. Let us explain how quickly and simply your car can be equipped, and how reasonable our prices—especially with allowance for your old tires. Put your car on Balloons NOW for the summer motoring season.

Atlanta Auto Association Indorses Traffic Crusade

The Atlanta Automobile association, composed of 175 automobile dealers and allied trade lines, has been taking a most active and determined interest in the efforts being put forth to stop violations of the traffic ordinances. The association realizes that the preservation of human life takes precedence over everything else in the community, and they are backing the efforts of the police department in arresting and meting out punishment to those guilty of speeding and reckless driving.

Outside of these considerations, the association is aware of the fact that disregard of the traffic regulations, followed by accidents and deaths, reflects upon the automotive industry in a most positive way, and seriously affects its development from a business standpoint. Atlanta Automobile Association Meets

At Cecil Wednesday

On the women of the Karo-Bataks, mountain dwellers of Sumatra, literally hangs the prosperity of more than 80,000 Malay people.

It hangs in the form of enormous silver earrings with which approximately 2,000 of the women adorn themselves. The estimated total value of these earrings, $800,000, will be invested in Fordson tractors and modern plows to aid in relieving a condition of dire poverty, according to the plans of Controleur Mulder, Dutch governor of the island. The governor has already ordered one Fordson for the natives and is working with the tribal chiefs to use their influence with the feminine possessors of the people's wealth.

Controleur Mulder, who has displayed rare ability in administrating the affairs of these people, only fourteen years under white rule, believes that the exchange of the/grotesque silver ornaments for modern farm machineray will be effected because the willys-Overland company, and C. V. Hohenstein, executive secretary of the association, on "The Aims, Purposes, and Ideals of the Association," will round out the program. Herough the course the service. The Fordson under order is to be used in demonstrating among the natives how waste land may be brought under cultivation by irrigation.

Can the Engine in this OLDSMOBILE ever wear out

Examine the engine of the new Oldsmobile Six, and you will wonder if a power plant so skillfully designed and so sturdily built could ever wear out!

Pressure-Feed Lubrication: You know that faulty or scant lubrication, is the arch-enemy of an engine's life. But in the Oldsmobile Six engine you find pressure-feed lubrication to every revolving part. This superior lubrication system means long life.

Big Crankshaft: You find a crankshaft of extraordinary size, perfectly balanced both statically and dynamically. That means elimination of vibration—and vibration is another foe of long life.

Oversize Bearings: Main bearings are almost as large as the cylinders. They are of the airplane type-used in Liberty engines during the war. Require no adjustment or replacement for 30,000 or 40,000 miles.

Splendid Cooling: Water, for cooling, flows all the way around all the six cylinders, valve seats and spark plug openings. Result—perfect cooling, no distortion, longer life. Valves are unusually large, cylinders are "honed" to a glass-like smoothness, perfectly-fitting grey iron pistons carry hammered rings. Result-perfect compression, surplus power and unusual long life.

Finest Units: Years of active service will also be realized from the Delco starting, lighting and ignition system, Harrison radiator, rugged 51/2" frame. Truly, it's a car built to give many years of satisfying service.

Matchless Value: You owe it to your pocketbook to investigate this Oldsmobile Six thoroughly. Your sound judgment will convince you that here is a car that looks good, runs smoothly, costs little to maintain -and one that will last and last and last.

FOR MOTOR LAWS

Automobile Groups Suggest Methods of Taxation and Regulation in United States.

The standards which the motor groups in the United States have adopted for the taxation and regulation of cars and trucks were outlined today by H. H. Rice, chairman of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce legislative committee, and president of the Cadillac Motor Car company, speaking before the World Motor Transport Congress of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce in Detroit, this morning (May 24).

Mr. Rice brought out the point that the motor vehicle owner, dealer and manufacturer organizations had worked together on these principles and had ed together on these principles and had attempted to formulate a program which would be equitable and a public benefit, realizing that any other program would necessarily be short lived.

Among the principles which these associations have adopted are the following:

The motor vehicle should be called upon to pay special taxes to maintain improved highways.

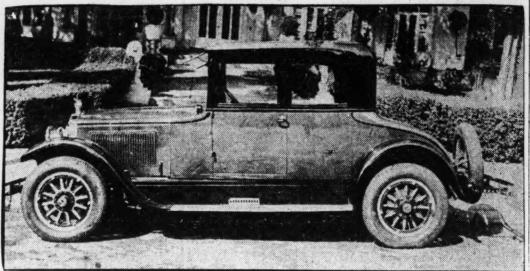

The original construction cost of improving highways should be borne by society-as-a-whole, including owners and non-owners of motor vehicles, all of whom benefit from the highways.

The state should be the sole taxation should not exceed the sum of money necessary for the maintenance of improved highways of the state and for the administration of the state with the state and the stat motor vehicle department. motor vehicle department.

In the matter of regulations of traffic, Mr. Rice brought out, there is great diversity among the forty-eight states. The motor vehicle conference committee, representing different organization in the indstry, has drawn up a set of uniform traffic regulations which it is recommending the form up a set of uniform traffic regulations which it is recommending the forey-eight bodies of lawmakers as a suggested standard. These points have to do with speed, when the slow down, passing another vehicle, signals, and similar matters.

"Can anybody explain why Georgians will waste their money on excessive law-making machinery and through extravagant, duplicated and complicated governmental agencies when they know such practices in their own affairs would drive them speedily to the bankrupt court?

"People glibly talk about spending the 'public money.' There is no such a thing as public money. Every dollar spent in politics and government is the money of the taxpayers, drawn directly from the pockets of voters.

Too Much Overhead.

"Every twelve citizens who are"

opinion and too great a lack of Information on many subjects for harmonious action and constructive legislation to be possible. One or two members of a comimitee will come in after the whole subject under consideration has been threshed out, insisting on going over it all again and profess that it is not fair to vote on a bill before they have time to further investigate it.

It is impossible to get members of committees to attend all meetings or to be present when bills are taken up. As the legislature is now constituted it is easy enough to plaster the statute books with insignificant, useless and often detrimental laws, but next to impossible to get through "Every twelve citizens who are carning anything is supporting one citizen in government. The sum we pay to run our federal, state and local overnments is equal to one-hait the mount paid for services by all the nanufacturing and industrial plants in manufacturing and industrial plants in America. Men in the employ of government are not producers, but they are consumers, and they enter into competition with the regular citizenship for their food, clothing and other ship for their food, clothing and other requirements, and they use the proceeds of the taxes paid by such citizens to increase the cost of living to those who pay the taxes.

"The cost of government in Georgia is already excessive and unless we check the trend of political movements it is coing to grow greater.

ments it is going to grow greater. Speaking to members of the legislature last summer during the noon recess, Mrs. W. H. Felton said: "Boys, et grandmother appeal to you not to reate any more new offices, but on the contrary, to reduce present offi-cial forces and increase efficiency. Why, in my own county I can not stand in my tracks and throw a stick wice without hitting an office-

"Of course, we must have public employees and we must pay taxes, but when there are too many officials and more taxes paid than are needed to run the government efficiently, it we who hear the burden and our children and our charities are the ones penalized.

Without Criticism. Without Criticism.

"I am not criticising any officeholder in Georgia, for we have a singularly clean set of officials, so far as they are personally concerned; it is the system that is blamable. There can be a lot of weeding out, elimination of duplication and overlapping in departments without impairing the service, but which will tend to in-rease efficiency and reduce expenses.

"Essential to any substantial change of sytem that will afford relief if legislation providing for:

"First—Election of all state officers for four-year terms, with the governor ineligible to succeed himself. This will eliminate the tremendous waste f money spent in uscless political ampaigns and elections. It will abate olitical strife, friction and confusion. Sound and economical government is impossible as long as voters are conimpossible as long as voters are continually swayed by passions and swept off their feet and their judgment campaigns and the persuasive appeal of candidates. Few people realize the money cost of campaigns and elections to say nothing of the resultant evils.

"Some who oppose this plan say that the candidates and their friends pay these expenses and that if they want to spend their money that way it's nobody's business but theirs. This is not true. It does not work that way. Every dollar spent and wasted in campaigns and elections comes diin campaigns and elections comes di-families off of the money earned and paid by the voters.

Free of Influence.

"This system will largely free state officials from the sinister influences of politics. The fewer elections held the fewer political debt must be paid. It will give them an opportunity to formulate and put into practice constructive policies and programs free from the constant fear that any cofrageous act in defiance of political demands will defeat them for reelection. This applies to every department of our government.

"An eminent and able Georgian highly credited and qualified for one of these positions requested me to say a through Atlanta.

but next to impossible to get through legislation What has been said of legislation. What has been said of committee conditions applies to the full membership on the floor of the house. There is but one remedy and that is a reduction of the membership of the house to about 100 members and the senate to about 35 members.

"New York with a population of approximately 11,000,000 people has 150 members in the house. Georgia has about 200. Georgia has more has about 200. Georgia has more counties than any state in the union except Texas, and Texas has an area of 265,000 square miles and a population of 4,663,228 against Georgia's area of 59,265 square miles and a population of 2,895,832. We have foolishly created too many counties in Georgia and since we can't uncreate them there is only one way to minimize the evil consequences, and that is to readjust legislative representation by a zoning system. representation by a zoning system.

Less Uaw Makers. "The way to do this is to create 100 assembly districts with as nearly equal population as it can be worked out. Also courts that are not absorbed to the courts of the co lutely necessary for the prompt and efficient administration of justice ought to be abolished and such offices as tax collector and tax receiver consolidated. We can never reduce our tax burdens and educate our chilour tax burdens and educate our children in Georgia until we reduce political activities and conduct our government with due economy and in a business-like and efficient manner. "Georgia cannot longer stand this legislation and administration.

"Fourth: A civil service system for state employees. We can never purify Georgia politically or enforce economy and efficiency in the public service until we eliminate paying political debts with appointments to office and the trading and trafficking in public offices. Only a civil service system can accomplish this. The vice system can accomplish this. The bill I propose to introduce on this subject will provide for reasonable vil service regulations and rules. It will permit the governor to appoint his private secretary, and perhaps one or two other employees occupyng strictly confidential relations with this office. This policy will apply to the heads of other departments, but the bulk of the employees of the various branches of the government will be put under civil service governed by reasonable rules.

Blocs and Factions.

"One good result of these reforms will be to remove from political life destructive and obstructive bloes and factions. Organizations of bloes and factions are becoming a detriment and a danger to Georgia. I will illustrate this by reciting a recent personal ex-perience. I was in south Georgia when field agents were being selected in campaigns and elections comes di-rectly out of the tax-payers' pockets. Politicians live and support their families off of the money earned and paid by the voters.

The new revenue department created by the extra session of the legislature. A south Georgia citizen highly credited and qualified for one of these positions requested me to see

"Good government is impossible under these conditions and the remedy is to be found in the reform meas-ures I propose to introduce.

To Penalize Voters.

"I am seriously considering trying to pass a bill through the next session of the legislature penalizing all qualified voters who fail to vote. My idea is to require every registered voter who fails to vote to file with the secretary of the county execu-tive committee a legal excuse within thirty days after the election upon penaity of being denied the right to vote at the next regular election; that is, that he be suspended from the voting privilege for the next inter-vening regular election.
"If the legislature has courage enough to pass this sort of a law we will have no more public officials selected by 40 per cent of the voters of Georgia. Attempt to suspent their voting franchises, make them think you are trying to take something away from them that belongs to them and you will have to drug them to keep them away from the polls.

That's some more human nature. "Great progress has been made in every branch of human activity ex-cept in our politic.l practices. Ap-parently we are unable to advance or

What the Biennial Means To the Club Women of Georgia

First, it means education. One hears of growing interest among the clubwomen of the state in every movement that means progress and uplift. The trend of thought and activity is directed toward peace and the education of peace, better citizenship, good roads, constructive legislation, education in its various phases, better films, child welfare, economies, sociology and a host of other absorbing issues of

We have certain convictions and opinions regarding these sub-lects, but we need further enlightenment and education. We need the firm conviction that the things we are working for are necessary, and we need the further education in the matter of getting results. The biennial offers a rich opportunity for a wide understanding of the im-  $\Lambda$  large and very appreciative auportant issues clubwomen are striving for. Representatives of nearly dience showed the wide-spread inter-three million clubwomen of the United States and many foreign countries will gather in Los Angeles for this important convention, June and communities feel in this com-2-13. There will be a youd debate that we have abundance grand fusion of intellectual ideas with practical, helpful information. of local talent of a high order. The program was well appointed and well

It will be a feast of inspiration, also. To the novice in clubwork, as well as the experienced member, there will come fresh stimulus and a wide impetus to "carry on." The contact with broad-visioned women from the various states and hearing of the accomplishments of other clubs will be a new incentive for greater effort in Georgia. In this state, where every club is a member of the national federation, we have a wide scope in which to carry out the suggestions of our mother engagization. At the last biennial, when Mrs. J. E. Hays, then state president, was elected to office in the federation, Georgia was represented by 49 delgates. These 49 delegates returned to their respective clubs with a wider vision and a new courage and the past two years has shown the result of the inspiration they received in the growth of federation ideals throughout the state.

Then there's the social side, the delightful hours of association when one has the opportunity to glean a little intimate knowledge of these sisters from other states. It's a joy to make new friends and to fraternize once more with those we have made before. The spirit of camaraderie which prevails at these gathefings is one of the things to cherish and remember long after the convention is over.

Heading the delegation of Georgia clubwomen to the biennial will be Mrs. Samuel M. Inman, national director for this state, appointed by Mrs. Brantley to direct the delegation. Georgia clubwomen are proud to have Mrs. Inman represent them at this great assemblage and at the national board meeting. That every club in this state is a per capita club in the national federation is due to her splendid efforts.

off superflusous weight, and keeping it off, it's Billy Gibson. Mr. Gibson's peculiar qualifications in the line of weight control comes from his long association with Benny Leonard, world's ligheweight champion. It is largely due to Mr. Gibson that Benny is still a lightweight champion. It is largely due to Mr. Gibson that Benny is still a lightweight. Benny's life for several years has been a long struggle against becoming a welter or a middleweight, or, like the once sprightly Packey McFarland, a heavyweight. If Benny once "let himself go" he might well be challenging Jack Dempsey. But aided by Billy Gibson, Benny hadn't let himself go. So he is still the lightweight champion of the world.

"Yes," said Mr. Gibson when I cornered him in his office on Forty second street, New York city, where he was struggling at the moment with the complications of the match signed up between Georges Carpentier and Gene Tunney, "I do know a little about taking off weight. United News Staff Correspondent.
Paris, May 24.—If there is one more fuss over the Olympic games, the French nation will be tempted to put a price on the head of the giddy optimist who first proposed that France should entertain the athietes of the world this summer.

The long series of troubles which have beset the French Olympic committe and advertised the nation in a most unfavorable way throughout the world, came to a new climax Friday when the foreign athletes began walking out of the shanty village established as their living quarters near the stadium at Colombes, squawking as they marched about filth, insects, improper ventilation and the primitive nature of sanitary arrangements.

The Americans have sent a written protest declaring that the village, although it may be an ideal little community from the point of view of the French engineers who designed it, felfills an American's ideas of what living conditions should not be. The American communication further stated that the food which it was proposed to provide for the maintenance of athletic form was "unsuitable" for American athletes.

Truguayans Protest.

The Uruguayan football team walked out of the camp Friday, protesting that the place was dirty and that the food was not only insufficient but sold at profiteers' quotations. The wooden shacks would be uncomfortable enough, the Uruguans said, even if there were not numerous varieties of insect life in the camp. And, anyway, the place was just generally insantary from the Uruguayan viewpoint, so the South American athletes moved to a chateau. Several other teams also Articles for Constitution the South American athletes moved to a chateau. Several other teams also packed their dunnage and cleared out to private quarters, leaving only the Egyptians in the village. These strange people shamelessly admitted that they were contented.

The French Olympic committee foreseeing a housing shortage in the region of the stadium if all the 3,000 athletes who were to have taken quarters in the village move into the hotels and private dwellings of the region, belatedly tried to solve the problem. Their first act was to place the blame, but it is not apparent that conditions will be remedied by this. They said the concessionnaire who had the contract for housing and that conditions will be remedied by this. They said the concessionnaire who had the contract for housing and feeding the polyglot multitudes, with their strangely varying tastes in food, ventilation and other accessories of life, had not fulfilled his contract. Efforts will be made to compel, him to do so, but it must be too late now to arrange things satisfactorily. For two years France worried over the financial backing for the Olympic meet while Los Angeles tried to bid the games away from France. By a supreme effort, France substracted herself from the money to handle the event, in response to promises that the country would make many friends and warnings that her prestige would slume if she forfeited the meet after having it awarded to her. And now that France has got the blame thing, it's more trouble and worry than a quarrelsome tomaat in a sanitarium for sick poodles.

After the Red and Black aggregation had crossed the home bag for the fourth time in the eighth period, "Mentor" Mosley, of the Mercerites, ousted Swain and sent in Hamilton to finish the fracas. This was the case on Friday, although it happened in the first round, when Georgia made three runs off of Swain before he was removed.

For both Georgia and Mercer this marked the last appearance in collegiate baseball uniform of a number.

where are joining in the clamor to see Yale try for the world championship. Yale's runaway victory over Prince ton and Cornell on Lake Carnegie last Saturday, coupled with her success the week before on the Housatonic, stamped her crew as one of the best she has ever turned out. Incidentally, it furnished another evidence of the writer's contention, put forward last year, that Ed Leader's rowing method was about the best thing ever seen in the east.

Last season it seemed to be diffi cult to convince the rowing experts that the Leader stroke was even "dif-ferent." Before the start of the 1923 rowing season, in which the Leader stroke was to undergo its first test, the writer told the whole story of old Hiram Conibear and his rowing the-ories, which Leader had imbibed, pointing out in just what respects the system was "different"-how the boat that is go up and down at the appli cation of the power, but would travel ahead between strokes, and how a crew using the stroke could keep it up without exhaustion for the twenty minutes of a four-mile race.

Every word of these predictions was verified by Yale's results in 1923, but still the eastern rowing authorities still the eastern rowing authorities would not be convinced. It is only a matter of a few weeks since one writer declared, "there is nothing radical about the Leader stroke. In fact, there is so little emphasis anywhere that it is difficult to discuss." Another wrote of "the terrific catch of Leader's varsity varsity varsity varsity. Leader's varsity crew," while others had various criticisms to make of the Yale oarsmen. Now they are calling Yale's crew the best in the east, and some of them the best in her history engaged in a training exhibition at an amusement park here this afternoon, going through his training routine, with the exception of boxing. with the exception of boxing. The firm is well and favorably known in local business circles. Known as hustlers and looked upon "go-getters" of the genuine type, Messrs. Morris have secured their part of the great tidal wave of business sweeping over Atlanta at the present time, and the firm is said also to be constantly and consistently adding to its large clientele. The offices of F. P. & George J. Morris are on the tenth floor of the Candler building. W. H. Boswell, shown in the center of the fear line, just joined the firm during the past week. He formerly was with John J. Thompson, building up a large list of friends and associates. A. B. New York, May 24.—A rather better feeling is reported the last few days in domestic dry goods circles, owing to the slow growth of conviction that it is quite possible we may have another short crop of cotton. This has not resulted in any material advance, but is so far manifest only in steadiness and in a slightly better inquiry for goods. The market at the beginning of the week will be much influenced by the weather conditions over Sunday, and we would expect prompt reselling should by bad weather fall to materialize. New York, May 24.—Only a small amount of speculative interest was displayed in the coffee futures market today. After an irregular opening at 6 points advance to 5 points decline, the tendency was downward with the close quiet at 2 to 9 points net lower. Covering orders advanced July to 12.41, from which it reacted to 12.28, while September sold off from 11.35 to 11.50, influenced by liquidation and a listless spot demand. Sales were estimated at 10.000. Closing quotations were: July, 12.29; September, 11.50; Octuber, 11.40; December, 11.18: March, 10.98. Spot coffee was dull with Rio 7s, 14½ nominal; Santos 4s, 18½ q19¼. There were no cost and freight offers in the market. Rio exchange on London, 1 1-16 pence lower; dollar buying rate 10 rela higher. Rio 50 to 260 rels lower: Santos 150 reis lower to 175 reis higher. Brazilian port receipts, 44.000; Jundiahy, 22.000.

HOLD MEET ON FRIDAY

IF MAD DOGS WERE LOOSE, WOULD YOU ARM YOURSELF?

There is only one sane answer---and yet people of Atlanta, and all over Georgia and the south are sitting passive while the greatest protective opportunity against triumphant death and its attendants, Want and Suffering, is literally thrust in their faces.

Facts speak for themselves. Glance below at the pictures of checks paid beneficiaries of Atlanta Constitution Insurance Policies in the recent past---they tell a striking story. Reflect that during the past two years approximately $20,000 in cash has been paid policy-holders or beneficiaries on life and accident insurance issued through The Constitution.

Above are the two most recent payments made through The Constitution. At left is a $1,000 check paid to C. C. Leavell, father and beneficiary of Miss Mary Lou Leavell, of 14 Scoville street, Atlanta, whose tragic death in a train-auto crash, in Atlanta, shocked the state on last Christmas eve. Miss Leavell was the holder of a $1,000 CONSTITUTION TRAVEL AND PEDESTRIAN ACCIDENT INSURANCE policy, but for some reason her father and beneficiary did not submit the North American Accident Insurance Company of Chicago proof of her death and a claim until May 10, 1924. The check for $1,000 was made out by the North American Company on May 12 and was received by The Constitution on May 15 for Mr. Leavell.

At upper right is a replica of a $500 draft paid Edgar Phillip Wagner, of 429 North Jackson street, Atlanta, who was the beneficiary of a $500 CONSTI-STITUTION LIFE INSURANCE policy, issued on April 9, 1924, to his wife, Mrs. Alberta Wagner, by the Gem City Life Insurance Company of Dayton, Ohio. Mrs. Wagner died on May 1, 1924. Proof of her death and a claim were presented on May 15, and prompt payment of the $500 face value of the policy was made to the beneficiary.

At left, below, is shown a $1,000 payment to Mrs. Sallie F. Stalvey, of 45 Lovejoy street, Atlanta, in payment of a death claim on a $500 CONSTITUTION LIFE INSURANCE policy held by J. F. Stalvey, her husband. Mr. Stalvey had always enjoyed the best of health, and his sudden death came as a shock to all who knew of his robust well-being.

Below, at right, is a $250 payment made to Geneva Martin, beneficiary of Charles Martin, favorably known colored man of 264 1-2 Smith street, Atlanta, under the pedestrian clause in a $1,000 CONSTITUTION TRAVEL AND PEDESTRIAN ACCIDENT INSURANCE policy held by Martin, who met death when an automobile swerved on to the pavement at a busy Atlanta street intersection and crushed him.

With death riding high in the saddle and with police authorities working day and night to cope with an ever-growing traffic menace that daily takes toll of life and limb, you can't afford to gamble with death longer. The Constitution's $500 Life Insurance Policy and $1,000 Travel and Pedestrian Accident Insurance Policy stand as the only two answers to the problem. Through them alone can you safeguard your loved ones effectively and with small expense. A phone call, a letter or a visit to The Constitution's insurance department will bring you complete details. Act now!

The $1,000 Travel and Pedestrian Accident Insurance Policy

conceded to be the cheapest and best protective policy of its kind offered a reading public, is offered by The Constitution for only $1 per year in addition to the annual subscription cost of The Daily and Sunday Constitution, the policy remaining in force only as long as payment on the policy and The Constitution subscription is maintained. The policy provides protection to the extent of $1,000 against death in certain specified accidents, varying sums for injuries, and $10 per week indemnity payment in case of total disability.

Below is a $1,000 payment made to Mrs. Ruth G. Dale, beneficiary of S. G. Dale, who held a $1,000 Constitution Travel and Pedestrian Accident Insurance policy, and who was killed in an automobile accident in Atlanta recently.

The $500 Constitution Group Reader Life Insurance Policy

the only straight life insurance policy offered by an Atlanta newspaper, provides protection to the extent of $500 against death in any form. It is offered readers for the mere sum of 15 or 20 cents per week, depending upon the risk involved, in addition to the annual subscription rate of The Daily and Sunday Constitution. The policy is in force only as long as payments are kept up on both the policy and The Constitution subscription. It is a new departure in life insurance, economical and efficient, and it is gaining widespread favor with wise people.

DAINTY LILLIAN GISH IN 'THE WHITE SISTER'

Hoveard Theater Shows One of the Year's Best Dramas.

Lillian Gish scores her most distinguished success in "The White Sister," which will play at the Howard : ll this week. "The White Sister" is a motion picture achievement that deserves and demands the use of all the praise it is possible to bestow, for nothing finer has ever reached the It is, perhaps, the finest dramatic offering ever turned out as a motion picture, and everyone concerned in its making, distribution and pres-entation is to be complimented most Miss Gish is magnificent. No actress of this generation on stage or or screen has carried the flame of sheer genius into her acting as does the frail little star of "The White Sister." One has to hark back to the thrilling intensity of a Duse and the passionate emotionalism of a Bernhart or comparison.

passionate emotionalism of a Bernhart for comparison.

Nowhere in the long list of screen plays has there ever been so convincing and thrilling a love epic as this romance of a girl and her young soldier lover. "The White Sister" is ... immortal love story of love that was tried in the fires of passion. It is a story of a lover who returned from captivity among Algerian tribesmen, and found that his sweetheart, who believed him dead, had joined the White Sisterhood. But nothing mattered to him except that he loved her, so he trapped her in his lodgings, defied dewill of God and man, and then! It is probably the greatest clumax ever seen on the screen.

Lillian Gish does not act, but rather lives the title part. Cast by Lature to give an illusion of belonging more to another world than this one, she puts a spiritual quality, an emotion and a tensity into the part which rises to breathtaking moments of artistry.

tertainly "So This Is London" would seem made for the Baldwin players. The story is well remembered. A violently American family in England faces a marriage of its son to a British girl. The Americans thus have an opportunity of telling what they think of the British. The British family has the same opportunity of exhibiting the British view of Americans. The romance is finally consummated when it is decided that both Americans and our British cousins are excrutatingly funny when seen as others see us, but in the long run there's a lot of good in both of us.

The fun is fast and furious from the jump. Of course John B. Litel plays the American youth enamoured of the

SOMETHING DIFFERENT AS HEADLINING ACT

Gymnasts Top Variety Bill at Keith's Forsyth-Bright, Snappy Patter and Song.

The Forsyth the first part of this week is offering an act entirely out of the ordinary as its headlining feature—the act of Ben Benson and Clevio Massimo, gymnasts of real ability, who with their pretty partner, Miss Kathryn McLaughlin, produce thrills aplenty.

They call their number a "Super Novelty" and in fact it is all that and more. They present a pantomim-ic interpretation which provides a lot of fun and many difficult athletic lot of fun and many difficult athletic feats.

Polly and Oz, whose names alone suggest a sojourn into the land of make-believe, will offer some syncopated comedy. Polly and Oz are a vocalist and pianist and they combine their talents to create "Syncopated Melody." These youthful artists are clever. Their work is perfect harmony and they have the knack of getting humor into their songs and music, a thing not often found but always appreciated.

Carson and Willard, who fill just 14 minutes of humor and song, in "Meet the Doctor," are a pair of eccentric comedy cross-fire chatterers. Few men could get more fun out of an argument than these two chaps who agree to disagree. Their chaffing is interrupted with an occasional song.

who agree to disagree. Their chaffing is interrupted with an occasional song. Dolly Grey and Bert Byron have hit upon an idea that is far away from the act presented by the conventional couple. Miss Grey has a winning Irish way and personality while Mr. Byron is breezy without intrusive or resorting to forced humor. Their skit is "A Girl's Weight", a one act skit—a vod'ville frappe, so to speak, written by Harry L. Newton.

The offering is in two scenes and is a specially pleasing combination of comedy and music with a very attractive special scenic setting. A public weighing machine figures in the "way" in the flirtation, which brings the inevitable question of can he call, with the almost inevitable "yes" answer.

with reference to her book, "Lummox," which seems to be one of the most popular discussions at the present time, and one of the most persistent questions is "why did she write it?" tells the story.

The following explanation is from the author herself:

In so far as it is possible at all to trace the genesis of the slow, silent hulk of Bertha, my Lummox, it seems to me that she first was suggested by the slope of the shoulders of char-women as they scrub at night and the silhouettes of figures who sleep on wharves and lean against ware-houses and lurk in doorways.

The lower parts of towns and cities are full of these doorways with figures crouched into them and dim old flames of faces. Lummox stalked out of this sepia world, numb with the pain of those faces. Dumb with their sufferings but turning with their shout her to make her attractive as the heroine of a piece of fiction. She came sullenly and she demanded to be written sullenly. And to get her said was a matter of defying all precedents for getting heriones said. She swung into motion with the slow rythm of a woodoo dance. She was unrelenting for getting heriones said. She swung into motion with the slow rythm of a voodoo dance. She was unrelenting in her demands. She required to be said in the key of her silence and to her and keep the beat of her almost like sitting down to play a composition to the tick of a metro And that rythm of her silence made the writing of her a torment. No character has ever dared put me through my paces as Bertha did. She had to be told in a rythm of her own choosing. The tormenting rythm of the voodoo dance.

It is practically impossible to dis-cuss the Lummox in terms of intent and purpose. The sea of her silence flows over and engulfs the mere attempts at telling. The method she demanded in the writing of the book holds good here in this attempt to describe her inception. To be told at all it was the standard attempt to the standa describe her inception. To be told a all it must be told silently.

NEW FICTION.

Inner Darkness, By Ethnelda Daggett Hesser. The scene of this most realistic story is laid in the blacksoil region of Indiana and it is based on hate and love, and its readers become very much interested in the potrayal of the "unadorned impulses of human nature."

While it is the first story of the author, she has handled it with all the experience of a successful writer of fiction and she no doubt will prove to be a worthwhile figure in American literature. (Harper & Brothers,

One day in September, 1524, a bog eruption occurred on Ponden Moor which sent a deluge of thick, black mud more than a mile in the direction of Haworth, where an alarmed father was expecting the return of the Bronte children sent out with their nurse to "take an airing on the common." Perhaps 6-year-old Emily was old enough to remember—if she saw it before their escape to safety—the impressive sight of the waterfall of thick peat tumbling from the height of Ponden Kirk to the valley below. She used this rock ledge—its name suggesting the Druids—as the Penistone Crag of "Wuthering Heights:" and one writer believes that the cataract that falls from it after heavy rains was the waterfall which Charlotte went to see when she accepts him to build up a great success for him. In the tale of their year of married life Mr.

Besides the members of the preacher's family who came, some preacher's family who came, some time in 1820, in a wagon full of household goods up the high street to the parsonage, there were others who had strong affection for the bleak village. A native whom lack of work was forcing to leave gave a last look to the steep streets and background of bage moors and cried: "Haworth!—dear Haworth! I will never forsake thee, with thy pure rock water and good milk at three ha' pence a quart!" He expressed, half humorously, the feeling of local attachment that Charlotte, Emily and Anne Bronte found a tie binding them so closely to the village which in the eyes of a stranger possesses small eyes of a stranger possesses small charm. #### This Will Make Digestion Easy

WHAT the dyspeptic needs is not soda and charcoal and breath perfumes but a medicine that will help his bowels to move regularly, for dyspepsia and constipation are allied. If you will take Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin systematically as the directions on the package call for you will soon digest your food properly and pass it out normally, and heartburn, belching, dizziness, nervousness and bloating will vanish. In time you can dispense with all medi-cines as Syrup Pepsin will have exercised the intestinal and stomach muscles so they act for them-selves. Mr. Lewis F. Schultz of Reasnor, Ia., Mrs. Victor Knodler of 3625 Bank St., Louisville, Ky., and hosts of others will verify this.

World Acclaims Success Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the prescription of a well-known physician of that name who practised successfully for 47 years. Formula Plainly Stated

Have no hesitancy giving Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin to anyone young or old. It is a mild, gentle laxative free from narcotics. It will not cramp or gripe. The formula is on the package, a compound of Egyptian senna with pepsin and simple aromatics. A bottle can be had at any drug store and averages less than a cent a dose. Economical for families and fully guaranteed. You will find it a great improvement in taste and action over castor oil, or "candy cathartics" made from coal-tar that cause skin diseases, calomel that loosens the tecth, salts in water or powder that concentrate the blood and dry the skin.

Missionary Society Hears Talk on Korea.

Hears Talk on Morea.

The Missionary society of St. Paul's M. E. church met in the F. O. B. noom Monday afternoon, May 19, with a large delegation. The program under the auspices of Circle No. 10, was very entertaining, with the chairman, Mrs. A. B. Gartrell, presiding. Misses Randall and Tensley, missionaries who are at present preparations. sionaries who are at present prepar-ing themselves at Emory university to return to Korea, talked interest-ingly of the customs and habits of the Koreans and the experiences they had while working among them as missionaries. A duet was rendered by Mrs. Lloyd Horne and Mrs. W. W.

Jackson.

A welcome was extended Mrs. M. N. Digby, a new member of the society. Favorable reports were given by the eleven circles. Mrs. Horne explained a poster, which was on display pertaining to the circle work.

A delegation of nine ladies from the Calvary Church Missionary society of West End were visitors. Short talks from the president, Mrs. C. E. Wilson, and others were en-

An event of widespread interest to a large circle of friends throughout the south, was the wedding of Miss Edith Hillyer Shive to George Masson Parker, which was solemnized at 6 o'clock Tuesday evening at the home of the bride on Sycanore stret, Decatur, in the presence of relatives and a few intimate friends.

The handsome home was a scene of great beauty with the entire lower floor thrown together and quantities of smilax and pink roses used as decorations. The nuprial music was artistically rendered by Miss Cliff Mashe at the piano, and Miss Agnes Adams, violuinst.

The ceremony was performed by candlelight, the Rev. B. M. Shive, father of the bride, officiating.

The bride and groom entered the library together, where the ceremony was performed, before an improvised and cathedral candlebra holding the burning tapers which cast a sort glow over the enchanting scene.

The bride was radiant in a draped model of ivory duchess satin, fashioned with a court train and trimed with rare old lace, a family heirloom. #### Miss Parker To Wed Mr. Hickey.

Wed Mr. Hickey.

Of cordial interest to a wide circle of friends in Georgia and the southeast is the announcement today of the engagement of Miss Mary Elizabeth Parker, of Americus, Ga., to James Edwin Hickey, Jr., of Atlanta.

Miss Parker is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elton C. Parker, and a sister of Miss Eugene Parker, popular debutante of Americus, Lieutenant C. Parker, of the United States navy, and Ensign E. C. Parker, Jr.

The charming bride-elect is a beauty of lovely blonde type and possesses an attractive personality.

Miss Parker comes of a distinguished family, prominent in the service of the confederacy. Her maternal grandfather, the late Senator Malcom B. Council, of Americus, and her paiernal grandfather, Leonard Parker, of Sumter county, were both distinguished soldiers in General Lee's army, serving throughout the war between the states and participating in much of the sanguinary fighting about the capital of the confederacy at Richmond.

Lieutenant Leonard Parker, her brother, served with distinction as an officer-during the war with Germany. Through her maternal ancestors, she is related to the prominent Harris fami-officer-during the war with Germany. Through her maternal ancestors, she is related to the prominent Harris family of Georgia, and the Blues, who have long been prominent in the social life of North Carolina. Miss Parker attended the Americus High school, later going to Hollins college in Virginia, where she was a member of the Phi Mu sorority. She completed her education at a fashionable school in New York.

Prominent Atlantans

Atlanta girls are signing up for camps and planning for vacations to be spent in the out-of-doors, many of them preferring camp life to any other.

Camp Juilette Low, in Cloudland, Ga., the sixth national training school for Girl Scout officers and the Southern Regional camp for Girl Scouts, is one of the most attractive, delightful and popular of camps. It is situated in ten acres of woodland on the shore of Little River, at Cloudland, on the ridge of Lookout mountain between Rome and Chattanooga.

At Camp Juilette Low there is not only a marvelous opportunity for an ideal vacation but a chance to get training for Girl Scout leadership, Registrations have come in from Georgia, Virginia, Florida, Alabams and even one from California. Thus

The woman whose face has a bloated appearance at times, as well as she whose face is permanently over-fleshy or flabby, should use the simple saxofite greenest which is made by dissolving one ounce of powdered saxofte greenest which any druggist can supply. Use as a wash lotion. There is nothing better to reduce the face to a normal appearance. The loose skin shrinks, bagginess and wrinkles are ironed out. The effect quickly shows in one's improved looks and there is a comfortable feeling of firmness and smugness. This treatment is far superior to massage. The latter, as a matter of fact, can afford but temporary relief and its continuance tends to break down the tissues and aggravate the trouble.

If You Have a tiny golden-haired baby girl or a chubby young man of a few years in your family you will be vitally interested in this story!

I don't know if the season of the year-graduating time-was respon-sible for the thought that came to Mary's mind or not, but anyway she came to see us the other day, and the main topic of discussion was "if we could only give Junior a col-lege education." Now it's a long time before Junior reaches college, being only 6 now, but Mary's husband's salary-well, her husband is a very good provider; however, there seems to be so little afterwards that seems to be so little afterwards that is hardly worth saving! You know yourself how those things are. Well, to make a long story short. Mother suggested that we see the Citizens & Southern Bank and see if it could not help us by suggesting some way in which we could provide for Junior's college education. Mother banks with the Citizens & Southern and I really think she believes along with other services they should advise how to raise the baby as well!

the bank and found that it had an excellent plan for just such cases. Mr. Cobb, of the Trust Department, Mr. Cobb, of the Trust Department, told us that there are two ways in which this may be done. An educational insurance policy or a savings fund—both placed in trust until Junior finishes high school . . . then the trustees pay each month the necessary sum to put him through. Mary decided on the savings plan—she deposits now each week in the Savings Department of the Citizens & Southern Bank $2.50, on which she receives three and one-half percent interest. She allows this to accumulate until it reaches the sum of $100 and then it reverts to the Trust Department and they invest it for her in safe government bonds and her in safe government bonds and at a higher rate of interest. For the next ten years—just $2.50 per week and at the end of this time Junior will be out of school and she will have nearly $2,000 to start him through college. Of course, she through college. Of course, she hopes soon to make her deposits larger and then she will have a great deal more, but just now she can make this and never miss it. In the event of her death the trustees of the bank will look after her feiting and see that Luncky works. affairs and see that Junior's money is taken care of.

Mr. Cobb explained that the best part about placing your estate in trust is that in event of the death of yourself or husband your child does not get your entire capital, run through with it or make bad in-vestments upon the advice of people that do not know, but just the in-terest from your estate which the trustees, able and experienced bankers, invest in safe and sound securities. I won't go into detail, but I wish you would drop in and talk the matter over with Mr. Cobb and let him explain it to you just as he did to us and I am sure you will start a savings fund at once. You will find the courtesy and the willingness to help you of the Trust Department equal to that of the other departments of the Citizens & Southern Bank.

The Ministry Of Suffering.

Sometimes it is hard for God's children to understand the trials and difficulties which seem to beset them, but it is in Just such experiences as these, if taken aright, that He is drawing them ever closer to Himself. At such times there is victory for the one who can look through the chastening to the Father's love and say:

> "No chance hath brought this ill to me; 'Tis God's own hand, so let it be, He seeth what I cannot see. There is a need-be for each pain, And He one day will make it plain That earthly loss is heavenly gain. Like as a piece of tapestry Viewed from the back appears to be Naught but threads tangled hopelessly, But in the front a picture fair Rewards the worker for his care. Proving his skill and patience rare. Thou art the workman, I the frame. Lord for the glory of Thy name, Perfect thine image on the same.'

Octave of Prayer for Unity Has Met World-Wide Approval

Women's Auxiliary ask all commun- why not invite these societies ions to join with them for Christian with you in prayer meeting for Christian unity?

The custom, first proposed by those in charge of the World Conference bring nearer the day of unity.

An octave of prayer for Christian unity has been observed for a number of years during the eight days ending with Whitsunday—this year from June 1 to 8.

Individual prayer is good, Corporate prayer—"where two or three are gathered together"—has an especial promise. And when such corporate prayer for Christian unity is offered by members of separate bodies of Christians, met together for that purpose, then on Faith and Order, has met with world-wide response by Christians of every name. Whatever may be our disagreements as to questions of creed or ministry, we are united in our common desire for unity and our common belief in prayer.

Agony In

"I feel that I owe a great, great deal to Cardui, and I am glad to tell of my experience with this wonderful tonic for the benefit of other women who suffer as I have," says Mrs. Pearl Cates, of Nebo, Kentucky.

"For a number of years I was in dreadful health. Every three weeks, regularly, I would be seized with the most awful spells of cramping. The pain was so intense that I have taken as high as eight grains of an opiate and not had the least relief. I would scream-I could not help it, I was in such agony, with pains across my chest, back and lower abdomen. It felt as if a huge knife were cutting me in two.

"I don't know how I ever lived through it. When one of these spells would pass, I spent my time dreading the next one which I knew would surely come. Nothing did me the least good, and I tried lots of things. Everybody would say, 'try this' or 'that' and I did, but with no relief from anything.

"One day a Ladies Birthday Almanac came into my hands. I read it casually but became interested because I read about a case similar to my own. I decided I would try Cardui just to see if it was as good as some of the women's statements said, and to see if they were true. I sent for a bottle and began to take it.

"At first my improvement was slow. I could notice slight change for the better. This gave me hope, so I kept up the medicine, taking it regularly—that is many women make their mistake, they are After I had taken three or four bottles I felt much better. I was delighted, because the spells were less intense and did not last so long. For two years I kept up the medicine, taking more than twenty bottles of Cardui. The attacks which I dreaded left me completely. I do not have them now at all. I am a well woman, and I feel as if I owe my good health

Tomorrow the New Plant of the Model Laundry Opens---

Tomorrow and afterwards Atlanta will have a laundry plant worthy of the South's finest city. A spotlessly new structure, flooded with sunshine from a thousand windows, as modern and as "model" as the most successful engineers can make it.

Here are some of its unique features:

- 1. An especially constructed system of ventilation that causes a continual flow of fresh air through the entire plant.
- 2. Walls of glass supported by skeleton steel window frames, which give daylight working conditions to every corner of the build-
- 3. And, of course, new and improved machinery and methods-methods that are so far superior to the old-fashioned ones as to entirely change your ideas of laundry work.

The Model in its new home offers a complete laundry service.

The Spectre of the Track

By William F. Sturm

Love and Friendship Carry the American Speedways Champion Safely Over a Mental Hazard.

EX MONROE had figured well. Satisfied that he had the best car in his career, he got away with the starter's flag like a flash. In fifteen laps of the two-and-a-half mile brick track he forged from fourth to second place. But his plan of action did not stop there. He settled himself more determinedly in been waiting was on, and Monroe was not disappointing them. They knew he had the speed to go into the lead, but they did not know that he had determined that this one race, with its Rex Monroe never played for the grandstands' applause.

The car came of the turn and was gathering speed for the flight past the stands. Even above the roar of danger. Knowing that he could be of no use to his driver in such a crisis, he did the wise thing-slid down out of his seat onto the floor of the car, as far under the cowl as the restricted quarters would permit.

THE crumpled front wheels turned inward, the frame of the car dropped to the track. The car's momentum carried it down the track with speed only slightly diminished, sparks flying from the bricks at the contact. The sliding racer hit a raised spot in the track. Its forward motion was arrested for an instant. Then it rose straight into the air, whirled drunkenly, dropped at right angles across and track and rolled over and over sidewise, coming to a stop upside down, with its crushed wheels

Kelly, his mechanician, seated on his right, and opened his throttle wider. He spoke no word, for so close was the bond between the two that words were not needed, and if they had been needed they could not have been heard above the roar of the self-made gale sweeping by their ears and the noise of thirty hurtling race cars, their drivers all bent on finishing the International Sweepstakes first. The hur fred thousand and more people wno were watching the race were expecting much of Rex Monroe since he had shot, meteorlike, across the racing horizon the year before until he had gained the topmost pinnacle of fame-the Three-A racing championship.

Now he was battling the first car for the lead. The spectators tensed. The speed duel for which they had $20,000 first place and its $15,000 accessory prize money should pay for the stout car beneath him and leave him a handsome surplus too—well, this must be the time to say it—ask Jane Corrigan the all-important ques-

Coming down the front stretch of the big oval in the ninety-ninth lap, Monroe gave the car everything he had. The yards separating him from the leader lessened to feet, the feet to inches, but the leader put a heavy foot on his throttle and the duel was even. But not for long. In a burst of speed Monroe took the lead. Into the south turn he flew. Into the backstretch, where his speed mounted to 116 miles an hour. Into the north turn .... He would soon be on the front stretch again and hear the plaudits of the mile of grandstands, though the wind the driver could hear the cheering of the tens of thousands of spectators. He shifted in his seat. He had demonstrated that he mad the speed. He knew he personally had the stamina to last the gruelling pace for 500 miles. He was satisfied with his car, for had not he and Kelly worked as they had never worked be fore on its preparation? . . .

Without warning the front end of the car sagged. Simultaneously with the downward impulse, Monroe's hands tightened on his steering wheel. Broken steering knuckle! Collapsed front wheel! Broken front axle! . . . These thoughts were uppermost in the driver's mind. In the thousandth part of a second between the knowledge that comething was wrong and the actual result his brain was active. Kelly, 100, had sensed the hanging grotesquely. . . . The perfect racing car of ten seconds before was only a mass of twisted steel! At the hospitals on the infield a girl, accompanied by two young men, forced her way through the morbid crowd clustering around the door. "I must know how badly they are hurt," she demanded of the guard. Her manner bespoke authority. It was absolutely against the rules of the guard to give the information, but he acted on the impulse: "The mechanician is dead, lady, but the driver's still alive!"

After three months in the hospital Monroe emerged as sound as a dollar. Surgeon's fees had taken every cent of his savings and his car was a wreck and still unpaid for. Within a month he had signed a contract with Jason Clifford, California millionaire, to drive a car being built in Los Angeles especially for the International Sweepstakes at Indianapolis the next May. He left immediately for Los Angeles to superintend work on the car.

Came the 1st of May, and with it the movement of the race drivers towards Indianapolis to prepare for the annual 500 mile race at the end of the month. Rex Monroe arrived at the track three weeks before the race. As soon as he had unloaded his car he quit work for the day and so timed his movements as to arrive downtown at 5:30. When Jane Corrigan came out of the Circle office building after a hard day of trying to keep her mind on her stenographic work, when it persisted in roaming to thoughts of a young race driver, black haired and ruddy cheeked, she plumped square into the subject of her thoughts.

"Rex! Not sure enough you! I thought you wouldn't be in until to-morrow!"

"Just wanted to surprise you, to see whether any other young man was running in the same lap with me, and likely to take first place in the Corrigan sweepstakes."

"Smarty!" she breathed, as she

"Smarty!" she breathed, as she hooked her arm in his.

Monroe plunged into the work of preparation for the biggest race of the year with all the vim he felt in once more being back in his home town. He worked early and late, doing the thousand and one things that go to make a race car well nigh perfect. Ten days before the race he reported to Clifford that he was ready for a speed trial. "She's tuned to the minute, Mr. Clifford," he said. "We'll try her now, and then we'll have plenty of time to work on her before the qualification trials."

THE driver's heart was light as he wheeled the yellow Clifford Special out. He had worked the car out on the Los Angeles track. Without taking it out for a trial he knew it was capable of turning laps at well over 100 miles an hour on the four cornered brick ccurse whose fame had spread the world c.er.

"What do you think she'll do for four laps?" Clifford fingered his gold stopwatch as he spoke.

"She'll turn the four laps at 100 an hour easily. Of course we can't average that in the race, because no car will stand it that long, but we won't do any damage for four laps at that speed, and it will give us an accurate line on what we really do have under the hood if we have to use it for a few laps to win the race."

Monroe warmed his car up for two laps and then held up his hand as he entered the front stretch as a signal to Clifford that he was ready for the trial. It was a half mile from the head of the stretch to the starting tape, and by the time the Special reached the wire it was traveling well over 112 miles an hour.

Four times the car circled the oval. As it stopped at the tape, after making the trial, a look at Clifford's face showed Monroe what he already knew—that his time had been miserably slow.

"They told me on the coast that you could drive this track with your eyes shut," Clifford snarled, "and I guess that was the way you just drove Ninety-one miles an hour with a hundred mile car isn't going to get us any place in the race. Is that all the speed you got?" The irate owner advanced toward the driver as he spoke, his face working with rage. "You're yellow-yellow as the color of that car! That's what's the matter. You're afraid to drive this track because you had an accident on it last year. I know your kind! Got no guts! Champion race driver of America! Bunk! And I signed you up for a year! No wonder you put a year's contract over on me. I'll-

Tommy Canfield and Bob Manson jumped off their perch on the safety wall. The next instant Tommy was planted square before Clifford, and a tenth of a second afterward Clifford was knocked flat by as pretty a left hook as ever one would care to see.

Clifford arose and rushed at his opponent. A speedway guard grabbed him, while others performed the same office for his assailant. Bob Manson had made no move to prevent what had happened. His slower moving mind was no match for Tommy's when it came to action.

"There's just one thing I want to tell you, you hunk of mud!" Tommy sputtered. "I'll cram every word like that down your damn throat every time you say it. Rex isn't yellow!"

"He's not, eh? Well, what do you call it? Here's a car he says himself will do over a hundred miles an hour for four laps and he wheels around at ninety-one. And he's got me tied up with a contract for a year!"

"Clifford has the wrong idea." The discredited driver spoke quietly. "I won't hold him to that contract. He can cancel it right now. No use trying to explain. There's something wrong."

A Blue Ribbon

Short Story

"I'll say there's something wrong!"
Clifford vociferated.

Tommy Canfield made another effort to break away from his captors. Rex took hold of his arm and together the three walked over to a car standing alongside the judge's stand and drove out of the grounds. There wasn't a word spoken on the four mile drive to the hotel. Like automatons the three walked to the elevator shaft and ascended to the eighth floor and filed into Monroe's room. Rex gazed moodily at the floor. More to himself than to his friends came the words, "There's something wrong."

"Listen, Rex, old timer. Don't say another word. We'll let you think it over." Canfield was too well versed in reading human nature to waste time in sympathetic words.

Once down on the street, Tommy turned to Bob: "Ain't it hell? What'll Jane say when she hears?" There was anxiety in the little Irishman's voice.

"We'll let things ride a while. We've got to figure the thing out," Bob replied, as he threw his cigar forcefully into the gutter. They separated, Tommy to get back to his job of being one of the best cigar salesmen in the city and Bob to go back to the coal yard of which he owned a half interest.

WAS a queer combination these three. Ever since they had played high school football together they had been inseparable. As they grew older their paths branched, but their friendship never waned. They were a well balanced trio: Tommy Canfield, hot-headed, generous to a fault, willing to fight for a friend at the drop of a hat. Bob Manson, slow talker, slow thinker, solid; not so demonstrative as Tommy, but loyal to the core. Rex Monroe, a wizard in engine lore, he had worked himself up the ladder from mechanic into an auto factory to test car and race driver, until he had been crowned undisputed champion of the American speedways. Then there was Jane Corrigan. When she had entered the triumvirate two years before Tommy and Bob had made preparations to hang crepe on the friendship that had existed for years. But Jane was such a good sport that the triumvirate still remained a triumvirate, because, as Tommy put it, Rex and Jane had split Rex's stock between them. When Rex was on the racing circuit Tommy and Bob religiously saw to it that Jane was amused. She played golf with them, and between times talked of Rex Monroe to them, which pleased them all mightily.

For hours after his two friends left, Rex Monroe did not move from his chair. He went over the events of the day painstakingly. He recalled his high hopes of victory in the coming race. He had worked hard on his car. Then the speed trial! . . . His foot refused to stay on the accelerator! . . . Kelly, good old Kelly, the best mechanician a driver ever had. . As he approached the spot of his accident of the year before he seemed to see Kelly rise and wave him down. In vain he had tried to keep his foot on the accelerator; an irresistable force lifted it. . . . And then the vision faded. His foot sought the throttle and stayed there. But a lifting of a foot for a few seconds when a car should be going to full speed spells ruin, not alone in a time trial but in a race as well. How many times had he heard the matter discussed among the drivers! It was a superstition with them that, once a driver became involved in a serious accident, he became overcautious on the track where the accident occurred—and overcaution will never win automobile races.

The next morning Rex arose and walked over to the door to get the newspaper an obliging hotel company had placed there. He scanned the front page momentarily, and then turned to the sporting section. In headlines half an inch high he read:

Rex Monroe, Former Three A
Champion, Branded Yellow
Clifford says Famous Driver Has Become Supercautious Since Smashup of Last Year on Local Speedway.

THEN followed in detail the story of the trial of the afternoon before. The whole world knew it. The very newspapers which a year before had been so keen to proclaim him champion of America were now just as keen to announce his downfall.

All that day Monroe kept to his room.

"I'm not a coward," he told Jane that night at her home. "I didn't feel a bit worried about the track. Never occurred to me. But when I got around close to where we had our spill last year my foot just wouldn't stay on the throttle. There was Steve giving me the signal to slow down and take it easy, just as though I had twenty miles on the nearest man. Without wanting to do it, I couldn't resist. That sounds foolish, but that's just what happened. I'm not afraid, though. Not at all. It's—Jane, I can't just explain it, but you understand. I—"

"Listen, Rex. I know you're not a coward. I don't care what anybody else says, I know you're not. The world just can't understand. Let's look at the matter sensibly. Tell me what happened."

After she had heard the story she put her arms around him. "We'll have to think this over, dear. We don't care if that old Clifford did turn you down. You can easily get another car to drive; you know that."

Covert jibes followed Monroe; heads were nodded at him but not to him as he made his way to the track the next day. He hunted up Harry Quiller, race impresario, who had four cars entered in the race. He and Quiller had been good friends for years, and he was sure Quiller would give him the wheel of one of his cars. "They never come back, Rex,"

Quiller told him, when he asked for a chance to drive. "Better not try any more races on this track. You're good for any other track in the country, but not this one. I've seen it too many times. You know yourself that I'm telling the truth. I'm in the racing game to make money. I have a car without a driver, but I've spent a year making these cars. They're the first 122-inch jobs built in America. It's a high spot in the racing game—this race. And, as the owner of several cars, I don't want to fall down. I've got orders for a bunch of cars. I'd a lot rather sell you the car and let you go it on your own. Then it won't reflect on me when you fail."

"You know I haven't a dime, Harry. No use talking to me about buying your car. If I hadn't spent all my cash on surgeons' fees last year I'd have had a car of my own long ago. That's why I went with Clifford. I

HE tenth commandment has always been perfectly safe so far as I am concerned I never had the least desire even to crack it. I never coveted any man's wife, nor his man servants, nor his maid servants, nor his oxen, nor his asses, nor anything that might be useful to him. But I always did think that if I should get a whole lot of money I would buy for my own personal use and adornment a bit of ermine. As I don't live neighbors to any king, I suppose that little drop of desire could not come under the head of covetousness, but if it does I haven't a chemical trace of it left in Minnie Maddern Fiske has purged me of the last drop.

No, I simply can't bear the thought of wearing ermine after hearing her talk about how they trap the poor little animals by putting something sweet and sticky on the fatal springs, and freeze their tongues off just to get their soft white little skins. She says ermine, the symbol of royalty and power, is in truth a symbol of veriest cruelty.

That's Mrs. Fiske's hobby-kindness to children and dumb animals. She simply won't talk of anything else. She says there is nothing else worth talking about or thinking about or writing about. She will tell you that she is not interested in the stage, that she cares nothing whatsoever about it. She says, "Dear, let's don't -talk of it-let's don't-talk-of it; not a bit-not even a little bit," staccato-like, every word softly and separately spoken and accompanied by an impatient little step this way or that. You know Mrs. Fiske is said to have the most expressive feet in the world. That's Minnie Maddern Fiske, on or off the stage.

She has not worn fur for twenty years, though she travels in all kinds of weather and all kinds of climate. She thinks women who do wear furs are silly and cruel and extravagant. She says that there are other things just as warm and more lovely, and that civilization can never advance nor will wars cease so long as women are cruel enough to wear furs.

Appropos of this, and of Mrs. Fiske and her hobby, I recall a perfectly ghastly experience-something that society in New York invited her to be an honorary member. When she accepted, the society did just what you might have expected southerners to do: took several boxes for a matinee performance to see Mrs. Fiske in her new play. Then Mrs. Fiske returned the courtesy by asking them to come back and see her after the perform-

You see Minnie Maddern was born in New Orleans, and so a Louisiana

I happened to be with her when they came and-could I ever forget that scene! All afternoon I had been sitting out there in the audience feeling like a low-down, cruel, vain, civilization-killing, war-making creature, because of a little piece of cat or something on the collar of my coat. It was a cold day and I knew there were chilling draughts back of that curtain, but just the same I couldn't bear to think of Minnie Maddern Fiske seeing me with that near-fur on. Not after what she had said to me. So I checked it before I went back.

But, my dear, you should have seen the president of the society that day! In the first place her hat was decorated with the most gorgeous paradise plumes I ever saw! And these are forbidden by law, aren't they? Don't they pluck them cruelly from the mother bird during the nesting season, leaving the baby birds without protection? Anyway, furs aren't against the law, so far, and the pretty president from Louisiana was fairly waving with them. But that was not the worst. She had on a cape—a white ermine cape—that reached from her shoulders to her very toes! Not real ermine, of course, but whatever it is that looks most like the real thing and costs most like it.

I looked at little Minnie Maddern standing there in the soft yellow chiffon gown she had worn in the last act. I looked at the handsome blond president in her splendid white fur cape and her waving aigrettes.

I looked at the rank and file, and I am willing to go on record that never in my life have I seen so many foxes and cats and skunks and other varmints, as I saw on the backs of those women surrounding poor little Minnie Maddern, with her soul on fire for the suffering fur-bearing animals!

Did she bat an eye over it? Why, certainly not! She's far too sweet and southern for that. But I knew how she must have felt.

Yes, I can still see those paradise plumes vaving in the breeze as that lovely Leuisianan president tossed her (Concluded on Page 12.)

Love's Reward For England's Most

HE congratulations of her friends, the undying gratitude of the girl she saved not the only rewards Lillian C. Starr has received for her heroic rescue of seventeen-year-old Mollie Ellis from death or worse at the hands of a murderous band of savage bandits on the northern frontier of India.

Love also has come to the devoted nurse as a result of the bravery she showed when, alone and single-handed, she made her way through a most dangerous country to the bandits' stronghold and compelled their chieftain to give up the English girl they had kidnaped.

Following the rescue that put the name of Lillian Starr alongside that of Edith Cavell on England's honor roll of heroines, this remarkable woman is said to have received more than 1,000 marriage proposals. By mail and telegraph and word of mouth they began to pour in on her as soon as she was safely back from her perilous trip into the Afghan country.

The greater part of these proposals came from officers of the British army. Lillian Starr's deed was just the sort to appeal to military men, particularly to those who have seen service on the Indian frontier and know from their own experience how full of danger it is even for a man and a soldier.

Lillian Starr was a widow when her rescue of Mollie Ellis brought her into the limelight of world-wide fame and she had felt sure that she would never marry again. But months of wooing on the part of one of the hundreds of suitors who laid their hearts at her feet finally swept her away from her resolve to remain a Major G. E. C. Underhill, of the First Punjabi Regiment, is the winner of the heroic widow, and a marvellously lucky man he is esteemed by his numerous rivals and by countless other bachelors and widowers all over the world. Her promise to become his wife came as the most welcome gift he could have received last Christmas day and dispatches from India say that they are to be married early this summer.

The major is stationed not far from the hospital where Mrs. Starr has for many years been serving as a nurse, and he took an active part in the vigorous search for kidnaped Mollie Ellis which all the British forces in that region made. But it remained for Lillian Starr, through the hold her noble generosity has given her over the hearts of the savage Afghans, to accomplish what neither the bravery of the soldiers nor the skill of the diplomats could.

On Mrs. Starr's triumphant return from the bandit stronghold, from which many thought she would never come back alive, Major Underhill was in command of the detachment of soldiers that met her and helped to ease the difficulties of the rest of her journey.

Nurse Who Rescued Mollie Ellis and the admiration of the hole civilized world are From the Afghan Bandits at Last Chooses a Husband From the More > Than 1,000 Suitors Brought to Her Feet Mrs. Lillian C. Starr, the heroine of the Indian frontier who is to become the wife of Major Under-hill, of the British Army Mollie Ellis, who was kidnaped by a mur-derous band of Afghans and whom Mrs.

Until then he had been known among his army friends as the most confirmed of bachelors-one whose heart seemed unlikely ever to beat faster for any woman's sake. But with his first burst of admiration for the little woman who had dared so much to save a girl's life and preserve the peace of the Indian frontier came also love.

For a long time it seemed a hopeless love. The heroic widow seemed determined to remain a widow. The pleas of Major Underhill and hundreds of other army officers with records of bravery and self-sacrifice fit to be placed alongside her own apparently left her heart quite unshaken.

But, luckily for Major Underhill, his military training had taught him the value of patience and perseverance. He practiced these virtues in this love affair of his just as he had so often practiced them in his military campaigning. At last, after a succession of disappointments that would have discouraged any less determined suitor, he gained the victory which the copy book mottos say the duly patient and persevering always will gain.

"I am the happiest and proudest man this side of heaven," the major wrote to a friend in London shortly after his engagement was announced. "My promised wife is not only the sweetest, but one of the bravest women that ever lived. What more could an army office want?"

Starr rescued

MOLLIE Ellis, the girl whom Mrs. Starr risked her life to rescue, is the daughter of Major Ellis, a British army officer stationed at Kohat. This village seems a very peaceful sort of place, with comfortable English houses lining its streets and lanes, but as events are continually proving, it is really a storm center of the most dangerous kind.

The reason is that Kohat is only five miles from the Tirah mountains where live some of the strongest and fiercest fighting men in the world. These barbarous Afghan tribes and the fact that through the Tirah mountain range winds the Khyber Pass, the great trade route between India and Central Asia, make Kohat the center of one of the gravest frontier problems to be found anywhere in the British empire.

A little more than a year ago two officers of the Seaforth Highlanders were shot to death without any warning as they were walking near the entrance to the mountain pass. A week later, in the dead of night and while a terrific storm was raging, a little band of fanatical tribesmen came down from their mountain strongholds to Kohat and made their way to the bungalow of Major Ellis.

They forced their way into the bedroom where Mollie

Eilis and her mother were sleeping, stabbed the mother to death and carried the girl away, clad only in her night gown.

Major Ellis was away that night and a fellow officer was sleeping in the bungalow as a protection to the women, but the tumult of the storm prevented his hearing the entrance of the bandits or the outcries of their victims. It was some time after the murder and kidnaping had been accomplished that he found out what had happened and gave the alarm.

The army officers and the civil authorities were amazed at the boldness of the crimes. What disturbed them most was the fact that women were the victims. Always before the Afghans had chivalrously limited their hostilities to the men of the border towns.

At once the whole machinery of the British government in India was set in motion to rescue the kidnaped girl and to bring her captors to punishment.

Fleets of swift airplanes went scouting in all directions, scanning every road and trail, every river and hillside. Caves were explored and every pass leading through the mountains was carefully guarded. Friendly tribes of Afghans joined in the hunt for the missing girl and her captors, and General Lord Rawlinson, commander-inchief of the Indian army, himself came to the frontier to direct the search.

But, although the girl herself could not be located, letters from her began to reach Kohat and other English settlements in various mysterious ways. They were not the incoherent pleas one would expect from a terrifed and suffering girl but clear, concise statements of the demands of her kidnapers. If she was to be released, she wrote, her cap-tors must be assured a large sum of money and full pardon, both for the kidnaping and the murder of Mrs.

After many days of vain search it was finally learned that Mollie Ellis was still alive but a prisoner in a mountain stronghold that was practically impossible of access to white men. With the aid of the ruler of a friendly tribe a package of clothing and other comforts were forwarded to the girl and that was all it seemed possible to do for her until somebody suggested calling in the aid of Mrs.

Mrs. Starr is the daughter of a missionary who had served for fortyseven years in India. She was born in the "danger zone" of the northwestern frontier, has lived there practically all her life and speaks the various native dialects as fluently as she does English.

Afghan tribesmen of the same type as those who stabbed poor Mrs. Ellis to death, and then carried off her daughter, clad only in her nightgown

Ten years ago she took up her work as a nursing sister at the missionary hospital at Peshawar. In 1914 she married Dr. Vernon Harold Starr, one of the hospital's surgeons, and they continued their work there together.

One night, three years later, they were awakened by what sounded like a piteous cry for help just outside their bedroom window. The doctor hurried out, followed by his wife.

As he reached the front porch of the bungalow a shadowy form sprang out of the darkness and plunged a long knife once, twice, three times into his body. By a miracle the doctor escaped instant death, but he died a few hours later just as his fellow surgeons were preparing to operate on him.

RIEF stricken, Mrs. Starr went to G England, but returned within a short time to India and took her old place in the hospital at Peshawar, where she has remained ever since.

Her husband's murder was believed to have been committed in revenge for the conversion of a young man from across the border to Christianity.

Some time after Mrs. Starr's return to Peshawar a call for help in serious illness came to the hospital from the village from which it was known that her husband's murderer came. She answered the call and when she was led to the sick man's bedside she recognized his as the assassin who had stabbed her husband to death.

But Mrs. Starr remained with the man until he died, giving him the best of care. Before he breathed his last he confessed the murder and begged her to forgive him.

This magnanimity on the nurse's part endeared her more than ever to the wild mountaineers. She became the only white person whom they held in great reverence and the only (Concluded on Page 11.)

An ancient com whose design is believed to show some of the architectural details of the Temple.

HE temple which King Solomon built in the city of Jerusalem 3,000 years ago is to be rebuilt, in all its original magnificence—right here in America.

Within a half-hour's ride of the city of New York there will soon rise not only a faithful reproduction of Solomon's temple, but also accurate reconstructions of the wise old king's palace and all the many other buildings with which he surrounded the temple on the summit of Mt. Zion.

The project that will mean giving the modern world a more vivid idea than it has ever had of the magnificent glories of Jerusalem in Solomon's day is already well under way. The immense amount of money necessary for this extraordinary undertaking has been raised, the site has been chosen and architects and draftsmen, working under the direction of eminent archaelogists and Biblical scholars, are busy with the designs and working plans for the temple and other buildings.

No pains and expense are being spared to make the reconstruction of these ancient glories faithful to the originals in every particular. Even the site chosen, within easy distance of New York's millions, bears a remakable resemblance to the rolling hill country in which Jerusalem is located.

For this ancient king, in all his former glory, is to live again through one of the greatest undertakings yet conceived by man to revive a great educational interest in the Bible.

This idea is the result of 30 years' study and research made by John W. Kelchner, a wealthy, retired New York business man, into the life of Solomon and his memorable reign of 40 years.

Cooperating with Mr. Kelchner in this project to reproduce the glories of Sclomon are a few New York men who share Mr. Kelchner's great interest in the subject.

On a vast expanse of rolling hill country resembling the geographical position of Mount Zion these admirers of the once famous ruler will construct the great temple and citadel which won him not only a temporary glory but everlasting fame.

For upward of a year a corps of draftsmen have been working on the plans for this gigantic undertaking. The architect in charge of this work is Harvey Wiley Corbett, of the well known firm of Helma & Corbett. Mr. Corbett was chosen for this big and unique piece of work not only by reason of his reputation for such work as the big Bush terminal in New York, but also for his artistic ability as witnessed in many great works, including the new naval monument being erected in the national capital.

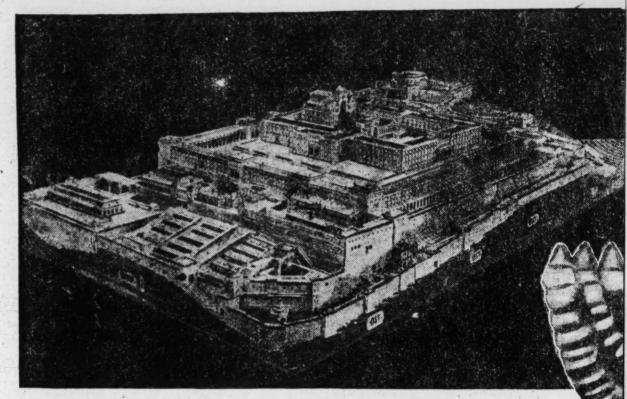

DURING the last 30 years, as time permitted from his business, Mr. Kelchner has devoted himself to an exhaustive study of Solomon and his political and religious attainments.

In this research he has spent upward of $500,000. He has made several trips to Jerusalem. With the aid of some of the world's greatest scholars, he has made an intensive study of the country where Solomon once ruled in all his glory in an effort to discover tangible evidence of this period of grandeur other than that recorded in the Bible.

Mr. Kelchner's research has also led him through the archives of the world's greatest libraries and museums.

Commenting on his work, Mr. Kelchner says that, aside from Solomon's domestic life, with its record of one thousand wives—an example which the modern world would hardly want monarchs to follow — the king's wisdom could, he insists, well be taken as a pattern by many of the leaders of present-day civilization.

In fact, Mr. Kelchner became so impressed with this idea that he finally resolved to call the world's attention to Solomon's greatness by rebuilding his temple.

At the same time he is preparing a book entitled "My Dream," which deals with this subject in a most picturesque

Work on the reconstruction of the temple, palace and other buildings will begin within the next few months and will be rushed to completion by the employment of several thousand men. Even with this great force, it is expected it will require at least two years to complete it.

THE Bible records that it required seven years to build the original Solomon's temple, and that 13 years were spent in constructing the palaces and other royal buildings and the wonderful series of courts and in completing the double wall around the whole, which served as a protection against the enemy.

Solomon, the Bible relates, sent into other lands for expert workmen, such as the artistic Phoenicians and the Egyptians. All the descriptions of the temple that have come down to us show that Egyptian art played an important part in making it the magnificent thing it was.

The replica which Mr. Kelchner and his associates are planning will cover an area of 60 acres. It will follow as closely as possible the details set forth in the various Biblical descriptions.

Reckoning the fortune left to Solomon by King David, his father, on the basis of the present gold standard, Mr. Kelchner thinks Solomon had at his command what would amount in our currency to about $5,000,000,000. With this huge sum in hand he began the erection of all the famous buildings which were to dazzle the world of his day and at the same time establish a high water mark through all ages for lavish expenditure.

Of course, this great expenditure

"Thy wisdom and thy prosperity," e told Solomon, "exceedeth the fame hich I have heard."

The lavish employment of fine gold the temple and palace decorations is equently referred to in the Bible. We ead there of the golden altar, golden candlesticks and flowers and lamps of pure gold. Even the hinges of the doors were made of gold.

From long distances building materials of every description were brought to Jerusalem for use in creating these triumphs of architecture.

"Solomon appears of have had a definite policy which he carried out successfully," says Mr. Kelchner. "This policy appeared to be to keep his people busy, to feed them and give them a magnificent place to worship.

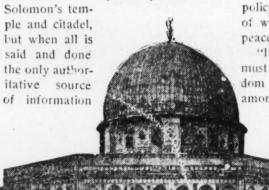

"My interest in Solomon began as a boy in Sunday school. The wise old king appealed at that time to my imagination and later he appealed to ination and later he appealed to me from the standpoint of practical economics.

"I regard him as the world's greatest political economist. His 40 years' reign was one of peace. Many modern rulers could learn lessons of distinct value from this ancient statesman. He proved himself a colossus among rulers. He was at the same time a great student, a philosopher and an astronomer.

"At times I have met with men who have tried to dispute my details of is the Bible. Foday only a few stones mark the site on Mount Zion. These may perhaps represent fragments' of this once magnificent structure."

WHAT Mr. Kelchner is undertaking will, when completed, faithfully represent all of the buildings described by ancient records. These will include the Temple of Worship, the Queen's Palace, the King's Palace, the harem and also the various courts and the numerous bazaars which supplied the needs of the temple and the citadel's population, estimated at 75,000, as well as the high double wall surrounding the buildings. These will all be reproduced in the beautiful coloring of ancient Ariental art.

It is estimated that the cost will amount to upward of $5,000,000. The reason for the great discrepancy between the cost of this modern production and the original one lies in the fact that very inexpensive materials will be used in place of the gold and precious stones and rare woods which King Solomon scattered about so freehandedly.

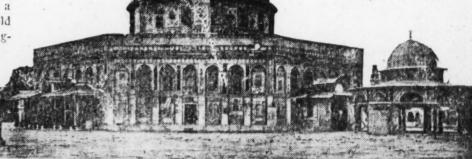

One of the buildings to whose details Mr. Kelchner has devoted much time is the one known as the "House of the Forest of Lebanon." This formed what would today be called a grand ballroom.

Here in sumptuous style Solomon entertained at great banquets. His guests at times were said to number as many as 10,000. These great feasts were usually in honor of visiting ambassadors of rulers from neighboring countries.

When one considers the cost of preparing the finest of foods and wines for so many guests and serving them all with gold utensils, some idea may be gained of the magnificence in which Solomon lived. American billionaires have a long way to go to rival this ancient monarch in luxury and lavish disregard of expense.

"King Solomon's large collection of wives," says Mr. Kelchner, "was largely the natural outcome of his foreign policy. He made international alliances by marrying the daughters or relatives of neighboring rulers. Whatever criticism we may make of this policy, it served to keep his country out of war and helped to insure his long peaceful reign.

"It has often been said that Solomon must have possessed superhuman wisdom in successfully maintaining peace among his thousand wives. According (Concluded on Page 12.)

In and Out

CHAPTER 1.

In Box B at the ringside, Johnson Boller vawned aloud. The yawn finished, he leaned over wearily and addressed Anthony Fry.

"If that little wheeze had the pep of a dead mosquito," said Johnson Boller disgustedly, "he'd take that big stiff when his hands are up like "that and slip him an uppercut that would freeze him solid!"

Anthony Fry's intellectual features relaxed in a faint smile.

"He's had several chances, hasn't he?" he mused.

"Several? He's had fifty! He gets three a minute."

Anthony Fry merely smiled, removing his nose glasses and tapping his teeth reflectively-and, among other things, causing the red-faced, partially alcoholized trio behind them in Box B to wonder what he was doing at a prize fight anyway.

As externals go, there was some ground for the wonder. Anthony Fry at forty-five was very tall, very lean in his aristocratic way, and very, very dignified. At first glance one might have fancied him a world-famous surgeon or the inscrutable head of the steel trust, but the fact of the matter was that Anthony, these fifteen years gone, had inherited Fry's Imperial Liniment. It implied a good deal in the way of income, yet even among his friends Anthony did not care to have the liniment phase of his quietly elegant existence dwelt upon too in-

Just now, perhaps, Anthony's more striking features were emphasized by the nearness of Johnson Boller, one of his few really intimate friends. Johnson Boller's age was just about the same, but he was plump, one might say coarse. Where Anthony walked with slow dignity, Johnson swaggered. Where Anthony spoke in a measured undertone and smiled frigidly, Johnson thumped out the words and laughed with a bark. About most things except food he was inclined to be gloomy and pessimistic, and this evening the gloom within was even thicker than usual, because Johnson Boller's wife Beatrice had left him.

She was a new wife and his firsta beautiful and spirited wife, all of fifteen years younger than Johnson Boller. She was in love with him and he with her, tremendously-and now she was gone for her annual visit of one month to the sister whose accursed husband owned great chunks of Montreal and insisted on living on one of them.

BOLLER had packed his grip and gone to stay with Anthony Fry, in that utter ultimate of everything impeccable and expensive in the way of bachelor apartments, the Hotel Lasande—and even the sight of the fight tickets, when Anthony's invaluable Wilkins had returned with them, had only brought a flitting smile to Johnson Boller. Now they were watching the second preliminary bout.

"In the main," said Anthony Fry, "that absurd little chap up there typifies my whole conception of opportunity.

"Huh?" Johnson Bolle: said.

"The chance for that fatal uppercut is there-it was there a minute ago and it will be there a minute hence. Our Tornado hasn't seen it yet; he may go to the end of the ten rounds and never see it, and yet, unless this Horrigan chap changes his tactics, it will be repeated again and again. Would he see it if the bout ran twenty rounds?"

"How the dickens should I know?" Johnson Boller muttered.

"I'd be quite willing to wager," inthony smiled 'soughtfully, "that he would see it!"

"What's the idea, Anthony? You're wrong, but-what is it?"

"Failure does not of necessity imply incapacity or ineptitude-or success and tremendous capability, in many cases, for that matter. Taken by and large, we are all made of much the same stuff, you know. The trouble lies in the failure of the plain, average, reasonably stupid citizen to recognize opportunity's one, solitary knock!" Anthony smiled, growing himself more interested by the second. "Now, if opportunity were but decent enough to knock twice, at least double the number of striving humans would recognize her nearness and grasp her. If she could bring herself to knock three times, say, our successes would be tripled. If"-

"Nix!" said Johnson Boller. "Any guy who can come face to face with a regular honest-to-goodness opportunity, Anthony, and not know her inside of one second he could have her tied to his right leg for two hundred years and never know she was there."

Just here Mr. Horrigan slipped while making his -nth jab at the Tornado's nose-slipped and fell upon the Tornado's fist and thereafter reeled about for a few seconds. Johnson Boller emitted his first real laugh of the evening; Anthony Fry, who had not even seen the incident, failed even to smile.

"It would be interesting," he said crisply, "to select a subject, Johnson, and try the experiment."

"What experiment?"

"That of learning just how many times opportunity must be presented to the average individual to secure full recognition of her presence and her beauties."

"Wouldn't it?" mused Johnson Boller.

"So, therefore," Anthony said placidly, "we will find our subject and make the experiment."

THIS time, and with considerable jar, Johnson Boller awoke to the fact that danger was at his elbow!

He sat upright and stared at Anthony Fry, and in the queerest way his flesh crawled for a moment and his hands turned cold, for he knew that expression of Anthony's all too well. Intent, wholly absorbed, that expression indicated that, however ridiculous the proposition might be, its fangs had fastened in Anthony's very soul!

This was the expression which recalled-oh, so clearly-the dread time when Anthony Fry had become obsessed with the idea that crime is a matter of diet and external expression, when he had secured the two yeggmen and established them where he could watch and feed them; when, eventually, he had been forced to pay for their crowning crime or go to jail as an accomplice!

This was the expression that brought back the period in which Anthony had cherished the theory that music's true germ lay in the negro race, properly guided and separated from all outside influence and-well, this was the expression, fast enough, and Boller's throat tightened. He had not even found words of protest when Anthony pursued:

"And upon my soul! See how the thing has been prearranged for

"What?"

"Look here, Johnson," the owner of Fry's liniment hurried on, quite excitedly. "Have you noticed how packed the house is tonight?"

"What? Yes, and"-

"Every seat in the place is soldexcept this one seat in our box!"

"What of it?"

"It's fate!" chuckled Mr. Fry. 'It is fate and nothing else, Johnson. Out of all the millions in New York, one man-absolutely unknown to, unsuspected by, either you or me-is coming to take this seat, doubtless for the star bout."

"But"-

"To that man," said Anthony, "I shall offer opportunity!"

Johnson Boller had recovered from the first shock. He drew a long, deep breath, and, leaning over to his old friend, placed a firm, strong hand on his knee and looked soothingly into his kindled eve.

Anthony!" said "Listen, "Don't!"

"Eh? You've no notion of what I mean to do," Anthony said briefly.

"No, but I can guess enough to dope it out pretty well, and-don't do it!" Johnson Boller said earnestly.

In Anthony Fry's eye the bluewhite fire of enthusiasm glinted out suddenly. Half rising, Mr. Fry gazed down the vast place, and then, with a smile, sat back again and eyed his

"Here he comes now!" he declared.

FAR down the mob, an attendant of the place was indicating their general direction to a shortish man in a long storm-coat; and now he of the coat had nodded and was pushing his way down the narrow aisle toward them, staring at the sea of faces as he moved along slowly and seeming a little uncertain in his movements.

Intellectual countenance alight, the mildly eccentric Anthony—really the sanest and most delightful of men except when these abstract notions came to him—was wholly absorbed in the newcomer.

Rather than stare directly he turned toward the ring as the young man in the long coat crowded into the box and settled down with a little puff, but one who knew him as well as Johnson Boller could feel Anthony's eyes looking past his lean right cheek and taking in every detail of theory's prospective victim.

He seemed to be about twenty. His clothing, from the overcoat to the trousers and the well-worn shoes, indicated that he came from no very elevated plane of society. His features, which seemed decidedly boyish among some of the faces present, were decidedly good. His hair needed cutting and had needed it for some time, and he was tremendously interested in the star bout. Elbows on the rail, cap pulled down to shade his eyes, the youngster's whole excited soul seemed to be centered in the ring.

In the tenth and last round, Anthony, with his strange smile, turned to the young man and spoke:

"Pardon me!"

The boy started with undue violence and stared at him, drew back and looked Anthony up and down as he said:

"Speaking to me?"

"I am speaking to you, young man," Anthony smiled benignly. "May I speak to you a little more?"

This, very evidently, was a sensitive boy, unaccustomed to chatting with really elegant, palpably prosperous strangers. The startled eyes ran over Anthony again and a frown came into them.

"What's the idea?" he asked briefly.

"There is a very large idea, which I should like to make clear to you," Mr. Fry went on smoothly. "I should like to have a talk with you, young man—not here, of course, but when the fight is over—and it will be to your considerable advantage"—

"It wouldn't interest me," he said with some finality. "I'm—just a poor lad, you know, and I haven't a cent to invest in anything."

"But you have an hour to invest, perhaps?" Anthony smiled.

"Nope!"

ir

"Oh, yes, you have," the owner of Fry's Imperial Liniment persisted. "It is for no purpose of my own, save perhaps to justify a small contention, but I wish you to come home with me for a little while."

"What!" said the boy.

THE young man was downright scared now. He drew away from Anthony until he bumped into Johnson Boller, turned hastily and asked the latter's pardon and then gazed at Anthony with eyes which, if not filled with terror, certainly held a quantity of somewhat amused apprehension.

He shook his head determinedly and seemed to be seeking words, and as he sought them a new element entered the situation. The red-faced person just behind Anthony Fry, having gazed soddenly from the youngster to the maker of theories, lurched forward suddenly and spoke:

"Let that kid alone!"

"Well, confound your impudence, sir!" Anthony began. "I"-

"None o' that stuff!" the total stranger said hotly. "You cut out picking on the kid or I'll step on your face."

The atmosphere was one of physical battle; the red-faced gentlemen in the box were filled with alcoholic spirits; yet who shall say just why the red-faced man, one of his friends stumbling against him, gained the impression that Anthony Fry had struck him a coward's blow from behind? Or why, with a roar of incoherent fury, he aimed a dreadful punch at Anthony himself, standing there quite collected, if somewhat paler?

That is what happened, although by no means all that happened. The unfortunate part came three seconds later than Anthony side-stepping the alcoholized jab, threw up his hands to fend off the jabber's whole swaying person—threw them, all unwittingly, so that his right fist settled squarely on a red nose, drawing therefrom a magic spurt of blood!

After that, for a little, nothing was very clear. Three sets of fists began to hammer in Anthony's general direction; three throats shouted—and three hundred took up the shout.

Men came tumbling toward Box B and into it. A large person in bright-blue shirt-sleeves, with a derby on the back of his head, received the third blow intended for Anthony and returned it with interest, just as that startled person was jammed against the rail.

"Come on, you poor lunatic! Come on!" Johnson Boller hissed.

"Johnson, upon my soul"— Anthony began.

"Never mind your soul! Get your body out of here before the cops find it and club it to death for starting this rumpus!" Mr. Boller cried agitatedly.

Anthony, unperturbed, laid a kindly hand on the youngster's shoulder.

"You'd better come with us, my son," said he. "They'll run you in for a witness and you may be locked up for a week unless you have friends to get you out."

This time he had startled the young man. Wide eyes turned and stared at him and there was a distinct note of fright in the voice that said:

"What do you mean—arrest me?"
"Of course, if you stay here," Anthony said. "Come with me and I'll take care of you."

And then Johnson Boller had caught his arm and was dragging him away; and Anthony, catching the willing arm of the boy, was dragging him after. Around the side of the ring they sped, where an interested group of fighters and trainers watched the melee; and, veering, on through a small door and into the night.

"Here's where the taxis wait," Mr. Boller said quickly. "Now, you beat it straight down the street, kid, and"—

"We'll take this one," Anthony interrupted, as he jerked open the door and thrust his bewildered charge inward. "Tell the man to take us home, Johnson."

JOHNSON BOLLER complied with a grunt. The kid, prospective victim of Anthony's latest notion, was still with them—and he seemed content enough to be there for the present. That possibility of arrest had jarred the youngster more than a little, and he hunched down on the little forward seat and breathed quite heavily. And now Anthony's deep, kindly voice was addressing him with:

"You'll come home with me for a little while, youngster?"

Mr. Boller drew a long, resigned breath and prepared to back the boy in every objection his doubtless normal mind should offer—but they chanced to pause by an arc lamp just then and he caught the boy's expression.

It was really a queer thing to see. No fear was there at all now, but only the overwhelming innocent curiosity of youth, mingled with an inscrutable something else. The boy's fine teeth showed for a moment as he asked:

"Pardon me, but what's it all about? Why under the sun should I go home with you?"

"Because I want to talk confidentially to you for an hour."

"Nix! I don't know why, but I don't like the idea. I think it's a little bit too unusual. Who are you, anyway?"

"My name is Fry, if that tells you anything," smiled its owner.

"Fry?" the boy repeated.

"Anthony Fry."

"Eh?" the youngster said, and there was a peculiarly sharp note in his voice.

"He makes Fry's liniment," Johnson Boller put in disgustedly. "He has a lot of theories not connected with the liniment business, kid, and he wants to bore you to death with some of them. They wouldn't interest you any more than they interest me, and you're right in refusing to listen to them."

"Umum," said the boy oddly.

"And now I'll tell you what we'll do," Johnson Boller concluded quite happily. "You tell me where you live, and when the man drops us I'll pay your fare home. Here's the little old Hotel Lasande where Mr. Fry lives. Have a real cigar and feel like a real sport! Don't you know how to bite off the end?"

"I don't want to bite off the end yet," the boy muttered.

"Sink your teeth in it. Now I'll get you a match."

He felt for one, did Johnson Boller, and then ceased feeling for one. That sudden low laugh of the young man's was one of the oddest sounds he had ever heard; moreover, as the Lasande doorman opened the door of the taxi, he caught the same odd light in the boy's eye—and now, he, too, had risen and pulled the disreputable cap a little lower and said:

"I won't smoke it now, thanks. I'm going upstairs and listen to Mr. Fry for a while, I think."

CHAPTER 2.

THE Hotel Lasande deserves a word or two.

In the strict sense it is no hotel at all, being merely a twenty-story pile of four and five—and even seven and eight—room bachelor suites of the very highest class. Moving into the Lasande and assuming one of its breath-stopping leases is a process not unlike breaking into the most exclusive sort of club. One is investigated which tells it all. The Lasande, catering to the very best and most opulent of the bachelor class, has nothing else beneath its roof.

The boy should have been sedate and subdued, to put it mildly, yet he grinned at the impeccable night clerk from under his cap and sent his impudent eyes roving on, to alight finally on the big chair near the north elevator.

"Who's the party with the big spec and why the prolonged stare?" the youngster asked irreverently.

"Eh? Oh, that's Mr. Hitchen, a neighbor of mine," Anthony smiled. (Continued in Tomorrow's Constitution.)

have to drive somebody else's car this race.'

"You take my advice-stay out of When we move to Kansas City I'll give you a year's contract and you'll make a pile of dough on the rest of the races."

MONROE'S face flushed. "I know you think you've got the right slant, Harry, and that's the argument we always used to put upthey never come back. But I'm going to get a car for this race and I'm going to beat the jinx. The thing is mental: that's what it is. It's not physical at all."

"It's there, whatever it is," Quiller answered. "I know that, and so do you, until it comes to your own case. Look at Benson-isn't worth a dime on the Beverly track since he drove into the grandstand and killed eight people. Jimmy Twyman-he couldn't win a wheelbarrow race at Altoona. Dingler-Tacoma is his hoodoo. Indianapolis is yours. Away from this track, Rex, I'll back you to beat any driver in the world."

A sudden nausea assailed Monroe. He turned away from Quiller, convinced that further argument was use-In the afternoon he went over "I'd like to borrow one of your old race jobs, T. E., if you'll let me," he

"Sure, Rex. Welcome to anything You'll find it over in the we got. Allison Experimental company garage. Make a connection yet?"

By special permission of the speedway manager, Rex waited until the track was closed for the day, and again took the borrowed car out. Resolved to test a theory which had been battering at his brain for hours, he drove the reverse of the track. He increased his speed to ninety-five miles an hour, and as he approached the accident spot he jammed his foot to the floor. There was no reflex action! Round and round the track he flew, the flood of moonlight making the going safe. Lap after lap he averaged a hundred miles an hour. But in spite of the eerie conditions surrounding the test, he no longer saw Kelly's warning gesture. He left the track exultant. He had proved satisfactor'ly that he was not yellow. His problem was mental, as he had felt, and not physical.

Three days before the race.

Monroe paced his room. He hadn't slept soundly for a week. His nerves were raw. He was a failure. Nobody believed in him. Owners who a year before would have almost got down on their knees to induce him to drive their cars now turned a deaf ear. . . He reached for the bottle of medicine Doc Alson had sent nim to quiet his nerves, took a double dose and went to bed, but not to sleep.

Out at Jane Corrigan's home three heads were in conference. Tommy Canfield had had the floor: "I got down on my knees and begged Quiller to let him drive, but the old tightwad said nothin' stirrin.' Tells me confidentially that a tourin' car's about Rex's speed on this track. And just to rub it in, he offered to sell me the car. Sa.d I could let Rex drive it then without anybody kickin'. Made me sore and gave me an I tells him, solemn as an 'All right, Mr. Quiller, that's really what I was out to see you about. I'm headin' a syndicate to buy the car and I'm ask'n' you what the He tells me twelve thouprice is.' sand smackers and he didn't wiggle a eye winker when he slipped it on me. I hemmed and hawed and said we close the deal tomorrov at 6 p. m. I'll make sweat, anyway. He'll not try very hard to get Rankin signed up, and the Ajax team will get him sure. And Rankin's the last good driver unsigned except Rex. By the time old Quiller finds out I can't even buy a sack of peanuts for cash he'll have to do some tall hustlin' to get a driver.'

A S Tommy spoke Jane Corrigan's eyes grew brighter, and as he finished she burst forth: "We've got to do it!"

The two men looked at each other, then they looked at the girl.

"We've got to do it. Why didn't we think of it before? We'll make it all come true, that's what we'll do! The three of us will take over the car. We're the syndicate you were acting

"Work'n' miracles nowadays, Jane -turnin' a buck into twelve thousand fish?" Tommy was the first to recover his tongue.

"I'm serious. Don't we believe in Rex? And wouldn't he give his head to any of us if we asked him? And can't we do the same for him, even if he hasn't asked us?

"If I had twelve thousand dollars, I'd—I'd—well, it's hard to tell what I'd do," Tommy told her.

"That sure is a funny joke, Jane," Bob Manson drawled. "The sherifi's about ready to read the papers over-our coal yard."

"We've got to get it!" the girl insisted.

"'We've.' Where do you get the 'we've' stuff?" Tommy had the floor

"Twelve thousand, twelve thousand," Bob Manson mumbled, and then, as if his mind had become adjusted to the demand, he continued: "How much can you get together, Tommy?

"It's not how much I can get, it's how much I've got to get. We've got to rope and hog tie six thousand berries apiece, Bob, by tomorrow night. Six thousand beans. If I ever had that much money I'd buy the statehouse or something!"

"No worse shape than me. We just bought a loading crane for our yard and sunk fifteen thousand in proper. But I'll figure my six thousand some way.'

"You're forgetting me!" There was an angry gleam in Jane's eyes. "We'll let you buy the motometer, Jane, that's what we'll do," Tommy answered.

"You'll not do anything of the kind!'

"All right, stubborn. How much kale you got?"

"Twenty-five hundred and fifty dollars.

"Laid away for your wedding and the like?" Tommy continued.

"It's my wedding, Tommy." "All right, have it your waywomen always do! Your twenty-five hundred is in. You can keep the even fifty. We only need ninety-five now. That's forty-seven hundred and fifty apiece. Easy. Shake a leg, Bob. Beg, borrow, raise a check, or steal.

"You two are wonderful-just wonderful!"

I'll look for yours tomorrow.'

"You're the first girl that ever told me that," Tommy rejoined, "and it puts power in me good right arm. These two highwaymen will get the jack." Then he grew serious. "But he must not hear a word. He'd gum the gum works and refuse to take the car. You just keep on actin' sad and I'll fix the rest. Nobody but Quiller need know. I'll slip the dope to that old joy killer and make him agree to tell Rex he's seen a vision and changed his mind."

INSTEAD of going home, Tommy talked to Bob on the sidewalk in front of the Corrigan home for a few minutes. Passing the portals of an innocent appearing chop suey parlor, he went to the rear, through the kitchen, and up a narrow stairway. It sometimes pays to be a popular cigar salesman. At the top of a flight of stairs Tommy paused and tapped three times, waiting an instant and tapped twice in quick sucession. After which he waited again, knowing that he was being given the once over by some one not visible to him. The door finally opened and he walked down another dark hallway through another door into a well lighted and richly furnished room, heavy with cigar smoke. On the wall was a huge board with the odds on the different drivers in the race. At the bottom of the list was Rex Monroe's name, with a blank where the car's name should have appeared, and the odds were fifteen to one. Before the driver's name was an asterick with that notation that all bets were off on drivers not having cars the evening before the race. Around the tables in the room one could engage in any game of chance he cared to buck. Walking to a desk in the corner, Tommy stopped before the man sitting there.

"I got something soft for you, Jim. Want to take a ride on a sure thing? "Name it, Tommy."

"I'm makin' up a pool to buy for Monroe. I got a hunch that he'll finish well up. Got an option on one of Quiller's wagons for twelve thousand. I can get Monroe to drive for the pool on a fifty-fifty basis for the rest of the year, beginning with the International Sweepstakes.

The gambler laughed. "Put your money on something live, Tommy. don't mind taking a chance, but I want to have something in my favor. Did you read the board? Fifteen to one that he didn't finish first. He's not good enough to get a car, even.'

"Did you ever know me to welch?" Tommy bristled.

"That's different. Now, if you want to borrow a thousand or so I'll let you have it on your word. But when it comes to taking your word on an investment I'm not at home.

"Suppose Rex slams his chariot across in first place? Twenty thousand bucks. Suppose he gets another tenner for usin' this or that battery and this or that ignition, and this or that? Thirty thousand berries. We give Rex fifteen thousand, we pay for the car, it's ours, and we make three thousand clear, not to mention what we're goin' to make on the rest of the races."

A Blue-Ribbon Short Story

"This state's got a blue sky law, Tommy. The bulls will get you if you don't watch out."

"Rex'll make the grade."

The gambler shook his head. "All right. I don't want to borrow a thousand. I've got about that much. I want thirty-seven hundred and fifty dollars.'

The gambler smiled. He had gambled on his skill in handling cards time without number. Here was a chap gambling on his faith in his It appealed to Jim Woods. Besides, he knew that if the young Irishman before him agreed to do a thing it would be done.

"I'll let you have the money, Tommy. And I'm sure that your friend Monroe won't win that I'll take a hundred of yours at fifteen to one that he doesn't finish in the first five.'

'Make that twenty to one on first place and I'll take it," Tommy promptly came back. "I don't want to rob you."
"Check," the gambler answered.

"Now, do you know how long it will take you to pay back that thirty-seven hundred and fifty at twenty-five a week?

"We won't discuss minor details, Jim. Write me a check, and I'll give you my note for it-my note that isn't worth a dime at the bank."

"It's worth it's face to me, boy." Bob Manson approached his business partner the first thing the next morning. "Say, Frank, we stand to make about sixteen thousand this year if things go right, don't we?"
"Just about."

"I know you've got some loose money in the bank. I need forty-seven hundred and fifty dollars. If you let me have it I'll pay you back in a week with 10 per cent interest. If I don't pay you back in a week I'll pay you an even six thousand at the end of the year."

"You better let the women alone, Bob," his partner said. "But you may have the money on your own terms."

By noon the twelve thousand dollars were in Harry Quiller's hands.

STILL led by the will-o'-the-wisp of hope, Rex went out to the speedway that morning. Passing Quiller's garage, he gave the door a wide berth, but Quiller himself was standing outside as though on the lookout for some one. As soon as he saw Rex he called him over to one side: "I've been thinking things over, Rex, and I've come to the conclusion that you can take No. 8. She's as good as any in the lot, and she'll run till marks You've got a day to look reach par. her over, but you'll find her ready to step right now.'

"You don't mean it, Harry! Hon-The grin with which the discredited dr'ver enforced his exclamation gave Qaller as much mental anguish as it did physical pain, which was not a little.

"That's all right, Rex. Better get on the job."

For just an instant the whole speedway danced before Rex Monroe's Then h's emotion passed and hé walked over to No. 8.

The news spread like gossip at an aid society meeting. Quiller was commiserated by the knowing ones, while a few thought it mighty white of him to throw away a chance at the prize money just because he had known Monroe for a long time.

Rex reported at once to the officials for his physical examination, and arranged to qualify h's car immediately. Since qualification speed need only be an average of eighty miles an hour for four laps he did this at once. After which he drove his car back into its garage, locked the door and went downtown.

It was dark when he reached his hotel. He reached for the telephone. Jane should be the first to hear of his good fortune. It seemed an interminable time before he could get her on the phone. "I've got a car, Janie. Going to drive one of Quiller's straight eights. Best car on the track. Quiller has it tuned to the minute, and I won't have much work to do. Everything is all right now, and I'm coming out tonight to tell you all about it."

"Listen, boy. You mustn't come out here tonight. You get right into a warm shower, eat your dinner, and go right to bed. You must have the rest, Rex. Will you do that for me, and will you understand why I wish you to do it? You must be at your best when you race. I knew you'd get a car-I knew you would!"

Rex Monroe heard the sob that followed the remark.

"What's the matter, Janie? I'm coming out right now."

"No-you get some rest. I'm crying, but I'm just crying for joy, Rex."

Rex took a bath, ate, and an hour thereafter was sound asleep.

At six o'clock next morning Tommy Canfield was busy shining up the car which he used for business six days a week and for pleasure the seventh. At seven-thirty he picked up Bob Manson, and a few minutes later they had stopped for Jane. They were old time race goers, and they knew the value of an early start in order to escape the congestion of the road. At eight o'clock they were entering the speedway grounds. Ten minutes later they drove the nose of Tommy's car into the reserved parking space, 18, directly behind Rex Monroe's pit.

Rex was busy, but as soon as he saw them drive up he hurried over to the barbed wire fence that separated the pit inclosure from the parking

"Got a hundred bucks on you, old timer, to finish first," Tommy yelled as he came up.

"How's the Big Three?" Rex asked as he reached the barricade and climbed over it. He grasped Jane's hand as she spoke.

"We'll be here rooting for you every minute, Rex." Jane squeezed his hand she spoke.

"You keep your mind on the job, Rex, and you'll beat the jinx. It's the same old mental hazard we meet up at the pond between eight and nine. Keep your eyes on the ball and swing on it and you've put her clear over the water." Bob put his hand on Rex's shoulder.

"It was mighty fine of Quiller to give me the wheel of one of his cars, and with pals like you three I'm the luckiest driver on the track. A fellow just has to win . . . I've got to be going. Got several little things to do. . . . See you after the race," Rex said, as he climbed back over the fence.

"Rex, where is that rabbit's foot I gave you?" Jane called after him.

HE came back and fished it out of his shirt pocket. "I'll carry the rabbit's foot, but it's the three of you that will help me get through," he said simply.

When the cars were ordered into their positions at the starting line they lined up in tiers of three, five yards apart, the position depending on the time made in the qualification trials. Rex's thoughts harked back to other days as he took his place in the last row, a quarter of a mile behind the leaders.

The five-minute bomb burst. The drivers began getting into their cars, the track was cleared of technical men, car owners, newspaper men, and photographers. Suddenly there was a commotion at the gate leading on to the track and a man with a newspaper badge on his coat ran out on the track. Officials yelled at him but he didn't hesitate. He went down the long line of cars until he came to Monroe.

"You've got about three minutes, he spoke hurriedly. left Quiller and he tells me that Tommy Canfield, Bob Manson and Jane Corrigan bought this car for you. I-"

"Bought this car? It's Quiller's.

"That's bunk. Quiller told me dif-ferently. He thought I wouldn't have a chance to see you. Great story, Rex. Friends buy car for you when all the world turns you down. Got faith you'll come back. I've got the exclusive on it. Quiller won't tell any one else. Got anything to say?"

Used to handle emergencies on the track, Rex was stunned by what he heard. The newspaper man's insistence was as a voice afar off. . . . They had done this for him!

"You got two minutes, Rex, and I'll get thrown off the track in a sec-The greatest story ever broke on this track. My God, man don't sit there like a dummy!"

Rex Monroe's voice was husky. "I don't know what to say."

"That's a hill of an exclusive story!" the newspaper man roared as a speedway guard pulled him off the track.

Monroe hardly heard or saw the one-minute bomb give its notice. His gaze wandered over the sight before Twenty-seven sleek racing cars waiting for the starting bomb. It was a sight once seen never to be forgotten. Every color in the rainbow had been drawn on to furnish coats for the cars. Here one of solid white, there one of beligerent red, another of soft blue, a gray one, a yellow one, a sinister one of all black, there one of gold, another of green, and varieties in between. It was the first year of the single seater, and to Rex the cars seemed tiny and frail beside those of former years. But he knew that look belied actuality. There they stood, the cough of their exhaust so soft that it was audible only to a few rods in the grandstands nearby. A blue haze hung above the cars, with the pungent odor of burned castor oil ascending like incense to the noses of the worshippers of the god of speed. On the inside of the track the pacing car stood, its driver waiting for the word from the starter, who stood on the suspension bridge directly above the starting

The starting bomb! The man on the bridge waved to the pacing car driver. The pacing car moved slowly away. Keeping their lines unbroken the contestants moved after it. Past the grandstands the cavalcade went, gradually increasing its speed as deafening applause greeted its advent around the track. Through the south turn, down the back stretch, into the north turn, out into the front stretch. The speed of the pacing car was well over seventy miles an hour. Still the racing cars maintained their appointed places in order behind the leader. Now, as they approached the starting line, the air was filled with a drumming and moaning as of an oncoming storm. The cars swept closer and what had been a sullen rumble to the spectators in the stands separated into the staccato of machine gun fire. As the first line of cars reached the starting tape the pacing car drew to one side and the red flag of the starter on the bridge described a wide arc. The moaning of the oncoming storm, the staccato of machine guns vanished into thin air, and in their stead was the roar of twenty-seven thoroughbred racing cars, masses of steel hurtling through space, eager drivers with foot now jammed hard on the accelerator, all restraint re-moved as they shot toward the south turn, a scant eighth of a mile away. The race had begun!

 ${f R}^{\,\,{\sf EX'S}}$  mind was in a tumult as he shot down the track. He recalled how Quiller had turned a deaf ear, and then had a change of heart. That should have been a warning that something was wrong, for he knew Quiller as a man of positive opinion. Driving instinctively, and lost in his ponderings, Rex was brought back to earth by the twitching of his throttle foot. He was coming out of the north turn at the smashup spot. His foot jerked off the accelerator. He felt his car speed drop. He thrust his foot eagerly forward, but it refused to do his bidding. The perspiration was pouring from him in a stream. Again he put his will into action, and the foot obeyed. But he had lost valuable distance in the struggle. As lap succeeded lap the spectre persisted. He was averaging less than ninety miles an hour, though his speed on the back stretch was well over a hundred and twelve. Ahead of him the leaders were piling up distance at an average of ninety-eight miles an hour. As lap after lap was reeled off the leaders continued to maintain their advantage.

"Rex is going into his hundredth lap—the one in which Kelly was kill-ed." Jane Corrigan twisted her program nervously.

"I got a hunch. We'll not think of anything but Rex this lap, and hope he'll keep his foot down," Bob Manson told the other two.

"Been doin' it all the time," Tommy said.

"Try it harder than ever," Jane implored.

Rex's mind was full of the sacrifice his friends had made for him. He shifted in his narrow seat and went through the north turn and drew near the fateful spot. He must not permit the sacrifice to be in vain. He must justify their faith! Then came thoughts of Kelly. The accident might have befallen any one. It was not carelessness on his part. It was the fault of the wheel maker, a fault that the driver could not guard against. If Kelly could only know how his friends had stood by him, if he only could. . . . Once again, as in the other laps, Rex's hands grew clammy, his foot twitched. He was getting closer. . . . Tommy and Bob and Jane! They had faith. The thought burned its way, cometlike, across his mental horizon. . . . . Could Kelly understand? . . . Somehow, there came a feeling that Kelly did understand. . . . The specter, there it was! . . . . But he would conquer! . His foot was pushed down to_ the floorboards now. Under his racing helmet perspiration rolled in streams. He set his teeth. He would not yield. He was at the exact spot. The track ahead became a blur to his eyes. His heart throbbed irregularly. his foot stayed down. His mind still retained a vision of Kelly as he had seen him in every lap, but his gesture had changed. Once more he made the circuit of the track. Again came the clammy hands, the perspiration, the rigid arms. He saw Kelly, but fainter. There was a smile on the specter's face, and Kelly waved at him in a one on the whole frontier whom they would not think of harming.

FOR this reason Sir John Maffey, chief commissioner of the frontier province, thought her the only who stood a chance of getting safely across the border and attempting to bring about Mollie Ellis' release from her hideous captivity.

"I'll be ready to start in half an hour," said stout-hearted Mrs Starr when the problem was put up to her. "All I have to do is to put on my heavy boots, load my revolver and fill my saddlebags with food and water. I am not afraid to face them."

In spite of the tearful protests of some of her friends, who felt sure that they would never see her alive again, she set out across the border, into the country where Christians are forbidden to go.

Alone she made her way over the precipitous mountain trails to the carefully hidden stronghold where the kidnaped girl was held prisoner.

"I have come to get that girl and take her back to Peshawar," she said as she faced the chief of the tribe.

And he, recognizing her as the woman who had faithfully nursed her husband's murderer, instantly released Mollie Ellis and did everything he could to safeguard the two women on their long journey back across the frontier.

The story Mollie Ellis had to tell after her rescue makes her a heroine second only to Mrs. Starr herself.

Frantic with grief over the killing of her mother and clad only in her nightgown, the girl was dragged nearly 100 miles over the rough mountain trails. Night and day she was manacled to one of her captors.

But, although she was footsore and fainting, half dead from exposure and lack of proper food, she never allowed herself to lose her courage. The cool, brave front she presented to the savage, fanatical tribesmen made a deep impression on them. Never in their lives had they seen such a woman.

When Mollie Ellis' period of mourning for her murdered mother is over, perhaps some of Mrs. Starr's more than 1,000 rejected suitors will turn their romantic attention to her.

head like a race horse and led off the conversation. Her remarks ran some-thing like this: "You were jes' lovely, Mrs. Fiske, and we're so proud of you. And I want to tell you somethingyou certainly do look young. Why even in this strong light, and standing as close to you as we are, you don't look a day over fifty." It wouldn't have cost any more to have taken off a few more years while she was "Do you all think she does?" —this to the members. And they came back like a Greek chorus, "She certainly doesn't look a day over fifty.'

And when they had gone Mrs. Fiske turned to me, having dismissed the whole thing as if it had never happened at all, and began where she had left off: "I must write. I must write a book. There is so much the world should know about this thing. So much that the world does not know. I have been gathering facts for years. I'm going to call the book, 'What Fiends These Mortals Be!'

MRS, FISKE and her husband, Harrison Grey Fiske, not long ago adopted a baby boy and that baby is certa nly the life of the party. When Mrs. Fiske was having her gowns fitted for her new play last winter she insisted on taking the baby with her to the fittings and the baby insisted on sticking pins in the fitter while he was trying to concentrate on his job.

"I'd just as soon try to put a coat on a canary as to fit a gown on Mrs. Fiske," he grumbled after they had got out of hearing.

Unline most people Mrs. Fiske has had the same husband since 1890 and he is in "Who's Who" too! Harrison Grey Fiske has several claims to fame. He is a theatrical manager, being manager for his distinguished wife, has done distinctive journalistic work, and is a drymatic critic of some re-pute. Won't it be interesting to see what sort of a man that baby is going to be after being brought up with genius to the right of him and genuis to the left of him?

Next to the Fiskes I suppose among the celebrated, the Marathon longdistance matrimonial laurels would go to Madame Louise Homer and her distinguished and long-time husband,-Sidney Homer. They have been married continuously and happily since 1895. And they don't adopt readyto-wear babies in that home. are six children, and a happier family one could never wish to see. it's so much more convenient for the rest of us when celebrities have regular husbands and wives like the Fiskes and the Homers.

Now there's Margaret Widdemer, the poet-novelist, and her poet-writer some-time husband, Robert Haven Schauffler. They married in 1919 and before we could get used to it they unmarried. This is particularly inconvenient because they both beto all accounts, he was exceedingly rich, his annual income, as records show, running into something like $20,000,000 a year. I suppose he gave his wives plenty of money and thus kept them happy."

Who the architect was of the temple and other buildings with which King Solomon crowned Mount Zion we do not yet know. It is quite possible that it was a man from Tyre named Hiram Abu. long to the same clubs and some of them are rather small and intimate clubs, where they are continually getting in each other's way.

The other night at a dinner the seating committee was stupid enough to place Margaret and Robert exactly opposite each other at the table. Margaret had a beau and with a sort of a Queen-of-the-May bandeau in her dark curling hair she looked quite

I can't say that Robert looked particularly sad, either, though he wasn't comfortable.

Things wouldn't have been so bad except for the fact that Mrs. Ludwig Lewisohn sat at the same table and talked incessantly and quite freely about her troubles with Ludwig. She said it was perfectly true that she was older than he but that didn't give him the right to hold her up to ridicule in a novel. Next day of course we all got "Don Juan" and read it. What she wanted was advice. She asked all of us what we thought she should do about Ludwig, and if we didn't think he should lese his editorial job. It was hard for us to say off hand, like that, especially as Ludwig wasn't there to state his side of the case.

As you may imagine, we were all more or less relieved when the coffee had been served and everybody began to mingle and mix again. Robert perked up immediately, but the fates were against him. Gertrude Atherton got him all mixed up in her mind with some one else, segregated him off in a corner and told him all about it—how the seating committee mixed things up and all that-never dreaming that she was talking to Robert about himself!

The Spectre of the Track

manner no race driver can misunderstand. A spectral arm swept in a wide arc forward. It said as plain as words: "Step on her and let her

L ESS than one hundred laps, two hundred and fifty miles, of the race remained. Monroe was himself again, the Monroe of old, who yielded a place in speed to no man. But far, far ahead of him swept the field, fourteen splendid racing cars, all deter-mined to beat him across the finish wire. A glance at the scoreboard on the back stretch told him that Logsdon in a Clifford Special was leading the race. He was in his hundred and sixth lap, while Monroe was in his hundredth and second. Ten miles behind! That meant for the rest of the race he would have to average four miles to the hour better than Logsdon to win, provided Logsdon maintained his present speed. It meant accomplishing the well-nigh impossible, an average of between ninety-nine and a hundred miles an hour! And the leader was not the only one to be feared. In second place rode Wilton in his Georgia Special; and behind him Olson in a Durant; Hart in a Beverly; Stein in a Tornado; Walsh in a Tocoma, and behind them lesser lights in the racing firmament.

Rex took close stock of his front tires as he rode down the back stretch. Then he squirmed in his seat enough to take in his two rears, his central position in the car making this comparatively easy. His slow speed had saved his tires. He figured they would be good for the rest of the race, regardless of the speed. Gas was his next-thought. He dared not risk that. He would go in, take on gas and oil, and fill his radiator; then he would know just where he stood. From then on he must drive, drive, Coming across the starting line like a bullet, he slid up to his pit, pointing to his gas and oil tanks as he came. Before the car had fairly stopped eager hands tore at the fastenings on the tanks and radiator cap. In less than half a minute from the time he stopped he was on his way again. He was greeted with a tremendous cheer from the stands, but high above it all he fancied he could distinguish the friendly greeting from the car hood just behind his pit.

Several courses were open to Monroe. He might ride along at an average of ninety-five and come in third or fourth. He might drive faster and make second or third. By a superhuman effort he had a chance, if everything went well, to take first or second place. His teeth clicked. Rex Monroe never picked the easiest course. Provisioned for the rest of the race, knowing exactly his problem, he set out to solve it. Only for the instant did he consider playing safe and thus saving his friends investment. Something told him that they would not wish it. He made his next lap at an average of ninety-six miles an hour, the fastest he had attained in the race. He made the next one at ninety-eight. Then he jumped his average to an even hundred.

An excited young Irishman standing on the hood of an automobile just behind Monroe's pit almost pulverized the stop watch he held as he exclaimed: "Rex made that lap in 1:30—an even hundred an hour. If he holds her there he's got a chance to come across first.

At a hundred and thirty laps the race had simmered down to the survival of the fittest. Only fourteen cars remained of the twenty-seven that had started.

At a hundred and forty laps the standing was: Logsdon, Wilton, Olson, Hart, Stein, Walsh, with Monroe next, and behind him the ham and egg drivers. Three full laps, seven and a half miles, separated Rex from the leader. With sixty laps of the race left, that meant he must lap Logsdon three times to win the race.

A T a hundred and eighty laps, with only twenty laps left to go, he had lapped the leader twice. Logsdon had been quiescent during this time, holding evenly to his ninetyfive miles an hour. Monroe knew the leader's mental processes, for he had often been in the same place. Ninety-five miles was a safe gait, and so long as the danger was not imminent it would be foolish for Logsdon to risk greater speed.

At a hundred and ninety laps Rex had eaten heavily into the one lap that separated him from Logsdon. He was running third now. A half mile ahead of him was Wilton, the second man, while a mile ahead of Wilton was the leader. The smell of battle was in Monroe's nostrils. He held his accelerator down longer on the turns. At times his speed on the straightaways went to a hundred and sixteen miles an hour. He thanked his stars that Quiller had made such a sturdy car.

Amid the cheers of the thousands of spectators at the starting line, Monroe moved up beyond Wilton, and thus went into second place. To do this he had increased his speed to a dangerous point in going into the south turn. The car swung perilously, first to the right, then to the left. There were gasps of horror from the stands. Just as the intrepid driver got his mount under control and was congratulating himself that he had done so, the car struck a pool of oil.

Try This on Your

AYMES CO., 3932 N. Robey St., R. 59 . Ch

So quickly that the eye could scarcely follow its gyrations, it swung completely around, sliding to the inner edge of the track as it did so. Then, as if ashamed of the terror it had struck to the hearts of the watchers, it moved serenely on down the track, as though it had been intending to do that very thing. The minute Monroe found it pointing right end forward he stepped on the throttle. Fortunately, there was no car immediately behind him when he started his mad whirl, and so little forward momentum did he lose that none had come up to him when he gathered up his reduced speed and went ahead. Thereafter he watched his speed going into the turn where the oil lay.

Ten laps to go!

Logsdon roared along almost a mile ahead. Rex looked at his tachometer, the little dial that registered his engine speed. But he failed to heed the warning of 4,800 revolutions conveyed to him.

Five laps to go!

Logsdon speed had mounted to close to a hundred miles an hour and he was less than an eighth of a mile ahead of his pursuer. Rex looked at his tires. The left front one was begining to wear thin. It might last or it might go at any minute. Yet if he should stop for a change the race would be lost.

Three laps to go!

Logsdon's pit was urging him to fresh endeavor. Monroe still came on.

Two laps to go! Logsdon had his foot down all the way now, and he was still two hundred yards ahead.

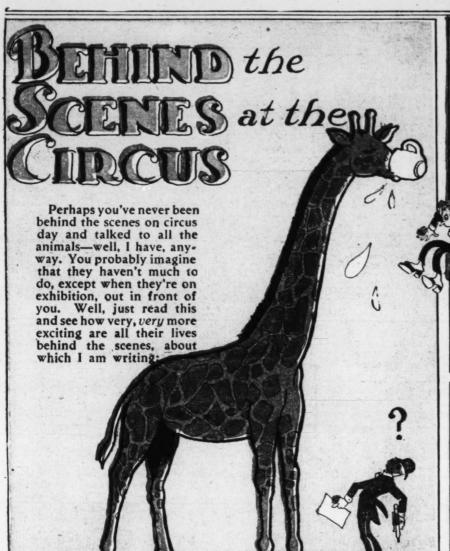

One lap to go!

The tall giraffe was drinking milk; he sipped it from a cup. "That's very good for you," I said; "be sure to drink it up." "Up, up!" he cried, and stamped his hoofs and watched me with a frown; "just tell me how I can drink it up, when my whole neck goes down?" "It's up from here," I meekly said. "Oh, go away," said he, "I do not like your tone—I think you're looking down on me!"

The king of beasts was roaring round his dressing room in rage, and when I asked him why he said, "It looks just like a cage. Why, anyone might think I was a lion in a zoo, instead of a performer with all sorts of things to do. And just observe the dinner they've sent in for me to eat—not more than twenty pounds of steak, that any bird could eat!"

The hippo was supposed to be awaiting guests; therefore, I went to see him; all I found w s one big, open door. "Where shall I knock?" I wondered as I looked around outside. Snap! went the door, and there was Mr. Hippo angry-eyed. "Was that your mouth?" I asked him, quite politely, as I thought; but all he said was: "People always talk more than they ought."

The camel, brushing out his coat, had quite a haughty air. "How warm it looks," I said, "and is it made of camel's hair?" He laid the brush upon the floor and looked straight down his nose; no one had ever asked him that before, I suppose. But then he just said "Humph!" and frowned, and so I went away, and hoped I'd find them all in better moods, some other day.

EDDIE COLLINS TELLS HOW HE MAKES A DOUBLE PLAY

(Written by Eddie Colilas Exclusively for This Page.)

Its own boys, Eddie Jr. and Paul, and boys they play with, ask Eddie Collins sorts of questions about baseball. Edhas collected some of these questions he tells the boys who read tha paper thow he answers them.

How Do You Make a Double Play at Second Base?

The success or failure of a double play depends mostly upon the execution of the play by the middle man at second base. Failure on this individual's part to handle the ball fast means a loss of the play at first base. In order to handle the first base. In order to handle the ball fast, he must be in the proper position to handle it and in order to be in this position it is most es-sential that he reach the bag IN TIME to receive the throw from the fielder to whom the ball was hit. He should avoid making this play while on the run. I realize balls are frauently hit so sharply that they are in a fielder's hands almost before one has had a chance to move. Bearing this in mind, I would suggest that the second baseman play a few steps nearer the bag when first base is occupied, than he would ordinarily if no one was on base. Always have the thought in mind "Cover that bag." Never leave the base unprotected, If play calls you elsewhere, have a perfecting understanding with the shortstop that he is as much responsible for the guardianship of the middle bag as you are. A BOY'S FIRST BIG GAME HUNT

How Do You Get Out of a Slump?

I think the answer to this can be summed up in one word! Per-severance. Slumps in baseball— particularly noticeable in batting are bound to overtake every player some time or other. Their coming is unexplainable—their presence most distressing, and often dangerous, as the contagion is apt to spread to other members of the The only cure I have found is just keep plugging along and you are sure to come out of it if you keep trying. It frequently happens that a player will go to bat fifteen of twenty times, which means normally, three or four games without getting anything like a base hit. Under such circumstances, when it has happened to me, I try to bunt or make a pitcher work down to the very limit to get a base on balls. Anything to reach base, to restore my batting confidence, which necessarily is at low ebb during a slump. Confidence is vourself while at hat Confidence is yourself while at bat —say to yourself "I will reach that bag" and MEAN it as well, and you are a hitter half made. Your ability will take care of the other half made. half, never fear into the body of the reeling animal Dale and Sid Carter had leaped for a death groan. the protection of neighboring limbs; Allan, clutching Sandy by the wrist, pulled him as fast as the slippery ground would permit, into hiding behind a great tree, while Mr. Halli-day threw himself into some bushes away from the wake of the ele-phants. The chances were, if they did not see the hunters, the animals would advance straight forward.

The forest shook with the weight of the giant footfalls while crack-lings of branches and trees falling everywhere mingled with the shrill, everywhere mingled with the shrill, angry frumpetings of the elephants, filled the jungle with pandemonium. Straight past the hunters they thundered. One straggler, which had apparently joined the raging army from a distance, crashed along so close to Allan and Sandy as to almost trample on them. A tree snapped at its base and fell into the thicket by Mr. Halliday's hiding place so that it seemed to Sandy his father must be crushed, but when the elephants had speeded on and were a mile or more away the path behind them a ruined waste with tons of trees wrecked, the hunters crept out cautiously one by one, and everybody, even Mr. Halliday, had by some miracle escaped injury.

(The story thus far: Sandy Halliday, a fourteen year old boy, has accompanied his father on a trip to British Erst Africa to secure specimens of big game for an American museum. The party goes up into the region of the elephant kingdom, trails some buils, but as they start sheeting at two of them, a head farther back in the jungle, whose presence the hunters did not suspect, come charging at them in full force. Now go on with the story.) The grinning natives let them-selves down from their crouching positions in the trees above, the danger forgotten, for most of them were veteran hunters who had seen many such hazardous situations. They fell upon the dead tuskers joyfully, whipping out their knives to begin the work of skinning. Preserving an elephant skin for a museum is a difficult task, rendered no easier by the fact that it has to be done rapidly. The natives worked enthusiastically, for to them it was a treat—the reward of the pursuit.

"Imagine yourself being killed by one of those," said Sandy in awe when the workers dislodged the

'That's what would have happened to you very shortly if we hadn't run for our lives," smiled Mr. Dale. He and Mr. Halliday helped Sandy lift the huge ivories up on end, to find that they reached far above their heads. Mr. Halliday guessed each pair to weigh considerably over one hundred pounds.

As the men were standing discussing the beauty of the ivories, a cry from one of the bushmen working on the elephant carcass working on the elephant carcass brought to their senses a feeling of danger. A rapier which the native snatched hurled through the air so close to their backs that for a second Sandy thought the savages must have mutinied. Then a piercing cry rang out as an animal dropped in its tracks. Mr. Halliday snatched his gun and ran forward, Sandy followed. A lithe slender animal rebehind the fallen foe. At that mo-ment the mass of creepers in the distance broke before the onrush distance broke before the onrush the air angrily, then fell over with "This one might have killed more than an antelope if our good native had not acted so quickly," responded Mr. Halliday. He was looking admiringly at the beautifully spotted skin with the strange marking over one eye only. "It must have been one eye only." one eye only. "It must have been attracted by the smell of fresh blood or have caught the scent of human meat in the air."

GIRL STARS IN ATHLETICS ARE SETTING HIGH RECORDS

training the varsity track team for many years, and who has developed other girl athletes, says, "Helen is the greatest girl athlete known in the world today. By that I mean she is an all-around champion. She can compete in twelve events and do all of them remarkably well."

Helen had very poor health when she was small, so her family kept her outdoors a great deal. She was known as a delicate child up until she was nearly eleven.

She's pretty as well as athletic, with a small, up-tilted nose, big dark brown eyes, drak brown hair, and healthy brown complexion. She has the sparkle in her eyes that goes with so much running and jumping and being outdoors all the time.

Breaks Own Record

Another sixteen-year-old is Katheryne Lee, of Wells park, Chicago. Last September at the A. A. U. national championships she cleared the bar at 4 feet 10 7-8 inches, which is seven-eighths of an inch better than the former record. Later she broke her own record, and set a new mark of 4 feet 11 inches.

Wouldn't our great-grandmothers wouldn't our great-grandmothers have held up their silk-mitted hands in horror of they could see Helen coming over the hurdles! How unladylike! Yet track meets for girls are becoming common everywhere, and other girls besides these two are turning their eyes to the 1924 Olympic games in Paris, for there will be many girls competing.

Track for Girls Is New

Track meets for girls are a pretty new thing, especially when held in connection with the big track meets for men. The girls have discarded bunglesome bloomers and wear running suits which do not hamper them.

This is the day of young cham-pions in many sports. Helen Wills, the women's tennis champion, is only eighteen. She won her matches against women many years older than herself. She had begun star-ring in tennis when she was still in high school, and won the girls' junior champiohships for two years, her fifteenth and sixteenth.

World's champions, and all of them of high school age—that's the story of the three girls who are doing their "stunts" in the pictures

Aileen Reegan, whom you see in one of her famous swan dives, won the fancy diving championship at the Olympic games in 1920 when she was only thirteen years old. She she was only thirteen years old. She was known everywhere as "the baby of the Olympics," and how every one cheered when she stood up to get her medal from King Albert of Belgium. "I don't remember how I felt when the king gave me the medal," Aileen says. "I was too young to worry much about kings. I was awfully proud of the medal afterwards, though, and nearly wore it out showing it to every-one."

Wins Other Championships

Since then Aileen has gone right on winning championships. She won last year the high springboard diving championship, and also many swimming races for the Women's Swimming association of New York. She takes part in diving contests all the time and has more gold medals than other girls have strings of

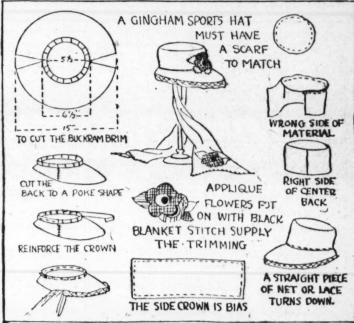

Besides being such a wonderful swimmer, she is also a very graceful toe dancer. Her father and mother are so proud of her! They have many pictures of her taken from papers and magazines in their papers. Brooklyp, But Aileen is "t home in Brooklyn. But Aileen isn't spoiled one bit by all the honors, all her traveling, and all the famous people who have made a fuss over her.

And then here's another wonder girl—Helen Filkey of Chicago. She just celebrated her sixteenth birthday by challenging any woman in the world to meet her in eight athletic events. Last September, when she was only fifteen, she won fame as the best all-around girl athlete at the great National Amateur Athletic Union annual track and field meet in Chicago. It was the first in Chicago. It was the meet of its kind in which events for girls were run. On that day Helen set a new American record for the 100-yard dash with 11 9-10 sec-

Here are some of the other records she holds: In winning the run-ning broad jump at the National Athletic union meet last September she set a world's record of 16 feet 6 3-8 inches; in an exhibition two months before she set the 60yard low hurdle mark of 8 2-5 seconds; in a competition she tied with the world's record of 8 4-5 seconds for the same event; in a 75-yard high hurdle event in September she set a record of 10 3-5 seconds; runof 6 seconds flat in the 50-yard dash. And besides all that, she has

You should cut your cloth cover-ing for the brim by laying the buckram shape on the goods. Sew the frame together and cover it as the diagrams show you. The crown is made from two pieces, the circle cut 61/2 inches across and a bias strip 21 inches long. Sew them to-gether and finish the edge of the brim with lace or net.

If your hat is made of a solid color, you should use figured scraps for the applique flowers. Here is a suggested color scheme; Green gingham for hat and scarf; pink and rose flowers put on with black blanket stitch; black net on brim. (Copyright, 1924, Associated Editors, Inc.)
